DEMOCRATS SEEM TO HAVE CARRIED STATE OF MAINE

Republicans Are Leading By Slight Margins For Two Offices

NEW DEAL APPROVED

Governor Brann Is Re-elected; State Prohibition Repealed

PORTLAND, Me., Sept. 11.—(AP)—The election of a Democratic governor and two Democratic congressmen apparently was Maine's answer today to a Republican appeal for repudiation of Rooseveltian policies.

A United States senator and one congressman appeared to be the only offices held by the Republican in yesterday's biennial election in this once rock-ribbed Republican state. The senatorial fight was still in doubt with 40 precincts still unrecorded.

The birthplace of prohibition, Maine persisted in its stand of a year ago in the national prohibition repeal movement, repealing state prohibition by an overwhelming majority.

Gov. Louis J. Brann, popular Democratic leader for whose defeat Republicans called as an expression of disapproval of the New Deal, was returned to office over Alfred K. Ames, Republican, by a plurality of nearly 30,000.

Returns from 591 precincts out of 631 in the state gave Brann 154,368; Ames 125,733.

Senator Frederick Hale, Republican veteran of 18 years in the senate, held a slender lead over F. Harold Dubord, Democrat, in contrast to the sweeping victories he has won in past years.

Returns from the same number of precincts gave Hale 131,676; Dubord 126,985.

Congressman Carroll L. Beedy, Republican spearheard of the attack of the Roosevelt administration, trailed in a close contest with Simon Hamlin, South Portland school teacher-farmer. Returns from 134 of 145 precincts in the first district gave Hamlin 41,938, Beedy 41,926.

Benefitting by the Brann appeal in the second congressional district, which includes Lewiston, the governor's home city, Congressman Edward C. Moran, Democrat, was reelected over Judge Zelma M. Dwinal, Republican, of Camden.

Returns from 176 of 213 precincts gave Moran, 42,980, Dwinal, 39,583.

In the third district, the northeastern counties to the Canadian border, former Governor Ralph O. Brewster, Republican, led Congressman John G. Utterback, Democrat.

Returns from 251 of 273 precincts gave Brewster 41,939, Utterback, 40,148. Two years ago, Utterback won by a few hundred votes from Brewster in a contest that ended only after the national house seated the Democrat over the protests of Brewster, who alleged fraud in some Canadian border towns.

Splitting of tickets by voters was more prevalent than in any election for many years. This practice did much to hinder compilation of the vote.

The contest for governor, which overshadowed all other contests because of the concerted Republican drive against Brann, saw him register widespread pluralities. The cities practically all went to Brann. Portland, which he lost by 700 votes two year ago, gave him a 2,000 lead over Ames, conservative retired Machias lumberman.

Intensification Of Efforts Urged

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11.—(AP)—An "intensification" of Republican efforts was called for today by Chairman Fletcher of the Republican national committee on the basis of returns from Maine, which Democratic Chief-

WOMAN IS KILLED BY BULLET FIRED THROUGH WINDOW

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 11.—(AP)—Mrs. Julia Cummings, 30, was shot and killed in the bedroom of her home early today by a slayer who police said apparently fired at her through a window.

The victim was the wife of Thomas Cummings, former chief of police of nearby Swissvale, and the shooting occurred at their Swissvale apartment. Police said the couple had received several threatening letters recently.

Cummings told police he was awakened about 3:20 a.m. by the noise of his wife falling from bed. He said he got up to lift her back into bed, discovered blood on the floor, and then noticed a bullet wound in her head. The window of the bedroom had been shattered.

Ballistic experts said death was caused by a revolver bullet.

Jes' Ramblin'

ABOUT THE TOWN

One of the election commissioners in today's primary election called to the attention of Jes' Ramblin' the fact that the ink sent out by the state to be used by election officials was made in Japan. "That doesn't appear like an effort to aid home industry," he said. "The Blue Eagle is conspicuous by its absence from the bottles. When we buy goods from foreign countries which were made by labor who have a standard of living far below that in this country, how can we expect the United States to return to its former prosperous condition? Buying foreign-made goods for the sake of saving a few dollars may be all right as a matter of economy, but it will indirectly rebound in the form of lessened purchasing power back on the state which made the purchases." Jes' Ramblin' heartily agrees with the gentleman's sentiments.

Some of the Delta parishes in northeast Louisiana have for several weeks been taking on the aspect of the cow country of Texas with the arrival of thousands of head of cattle from the drouth-stricken areas, Jes Ramblin hears. Dozens of solid trainloads of nearly every conceivable breed of cattle have passed through Monroe en route to the parishes which have been designated by the government as grazing areas during the approaching winter months. You'll have to hand it to Uncle Samuel—he's footing the bill, as usual these days.

Those broad smiles you see creasing the faces of a lot of Twin City merchants are caused by the fact that cotton is now moving to the market and Mr. Farmer is coming to town to do a lot of buying that he has been delaying for many months. Tax exemption certificates, as required by the Bankhead cotton act, have been received here and are being distributed to the cotton growers, thus removing the obstacle in the way of the immediate sale of the south's principal commodity, which is bringing a better price than it has in many a moon.

2 CHILDREN DIE IN PORCH BLAZE

Flames Burst From Stove On Which Mixture Is Heating

MIAMI, Fla., Sept. 11.—(AP)—Seared by flame that swept the porch of their parents' home here, six-year-old Ann Swales and her brother Norman, 3, were dead today.

Their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Swales, and a third child, Palmer, 8, were expected to recover from burns they suffered as flames burst from a stove on which was heating a mixture of wax and turpentine.

Swales, manufacturer of wax products, told Fire Inspector J. S. Dempsey he was experimenting with the mixture. He said he thought the stove exploded, but Dempsey said he believed the mixture created gas which ignited.

The father was able to close a door leading into living rooms, but the flame eddied out onto the porch, searing the children. Mrs. Swales suffered burns as she endeavored to extinguish Norman's burning clothing by holding him against her.

Norman died soon after admission to a hospital and his sister succumbed today.

VIOLENCE BREAKS OUT ANEW IN BIG TEXTILE WALKOUT

Presidential Mediation Board Confers With Manufacturers

RIOT IN PENNSYLVANIA

'Flying Squadron' Stages Demonstration At Carolina Mills

(By Associated Press)

Violence broke out anew in several textile centers Tuesday, as the presidential mediation board discussed the strike with manufacturers.

Lancaster, Pa., was the scene of a riot. More than 1,000 pickets and strike sympathizers stormed a mill, injured half a dozen workers and overturned automobiles.

Around the Cannon Towel mills at Kannapolis, N. C., 1,200 pickets—"a flying squadron"—surged, shouting defiance. Facing them were 300 special guards and militiamen armed with bayonets and tear gas, and machine guns, mounted atop the mills.

The squadron leaders said it was "a demonstration to the Cannon employes of the strike's strength." The crowd dispersed after the demonstration. In the ranks were strikers from Gastonia, Concord, Salisbury and Mooresville, who arrived in a 100-car motorcade.

In three New England states, national guard troops were mobilized for the first time since the textile strike was called.

Two Providence, R. I., armories quartered a "skeleton regiment" of 180 national guardsmen. In Hartford, Conn., two companies were ready to move to Williamantic, where 1,000 strikers massed Monday for picket duty, and two companies mobilized at Lewiston, Me.

The Rhode Island troops were prepared to move to the Sayles Finishing company plant at Saylesville, where two persons were shot and about 25 injured in rioting Monday.

The early shift entered the plant without incident Tuesday. State police Monday battled the mob for hours. Repeatedly laying down tear gas barrages.

Disorder broke out in Bridgeport, Pa. Several persons were slightly injured when employes of a plant attempted to report for work.

Another tense spot was High Point, N. C., where six strikers suffered flesh wounds from soldiers' bayonets in a clash late Monday night.

CHILDREN BATTLE DEATH; SUFFERING FROM POISONING

Curiosity Causes Demise Of One, Critical Illness Of Two

LAWRENCEBURG, Tenn., Sept. 11.—(AP)—A little eight-year-old girl and a boy of 14 struggled for life today against the slow working of a powerful poison that has already brought death to a playmate.

Eric Gowen, 12, son of Mrs. Rufus Gowen of Brace, an agricultural community near here, died last Friday night of the effect of eating the poison, an insectide powder spread on pieces of apple.

His sister, Margaret Gowen, and Hubert Dyer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Dyer, with whom the Gowens make their home, have survived until today the deadly action of the powder, but physicians held little hope for them.

Childish curiosity about the taste of the powder was blamed for their suffering and Eric's death.

The three first became ill about two

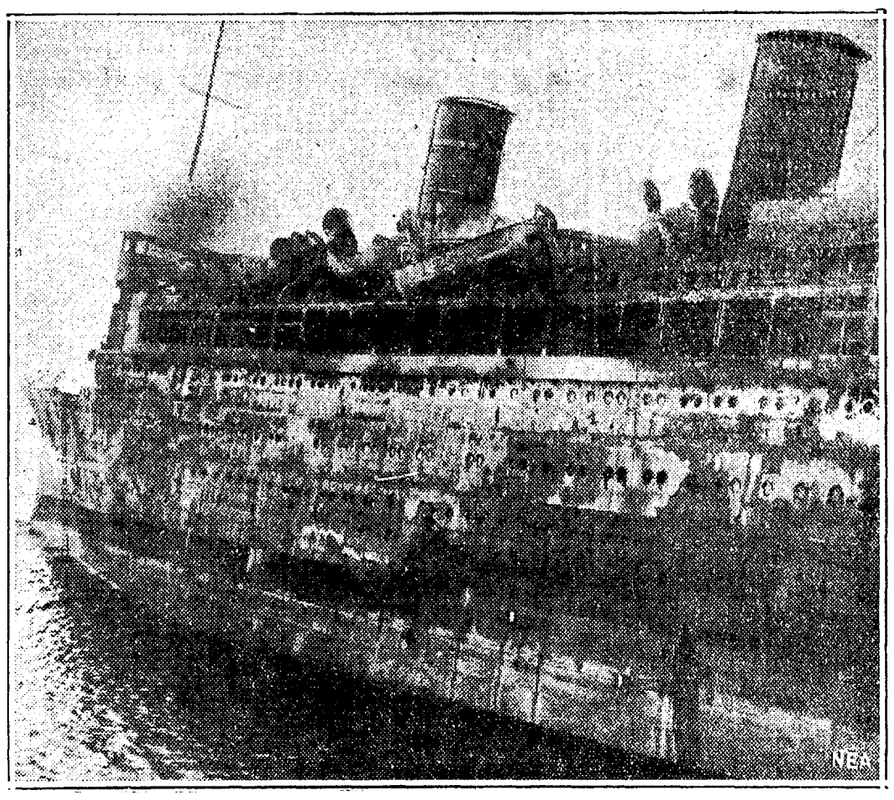
Kidnap Gang Shadowed Premier For Some Time

OTTAWA, Sept. 11.—(AP)—A gang plotting to kidnap Premier R. B. Bennett shadowed the statesman for some time before he left Ottawa for Geneva as a delegate to the league of nations meeting, police said today.

Inspector Mortimer Culver said details of the plot were disclosed by an unnamed prisoner held on a housebreaking charge. The prisoner said that he and three other Ottawa men were involved in the conspiracy.

Police said the plan was to seize the premier in his apartment in the Chateau Laurier and to hold him for ransom.

HOW DISASTER'S FLAMES BRANDED LINER'S HULL



It requires only a vivid imagination to reconstruct from this closeup of the Morro Castle's hull the immensity of the disaster that overtook it. Its metal plates are laid bare by flames that roared out of stateroom portholes and voraciously consumed the glistening paint that identified it as one of the best-maintained ships on the seas. The intensity of the flames that trapped passengers in their staterooms can be judged from the twisted and charred hulks of life-boats left hanging in their davits because the unbearable furnace heat made launching impossible.

MUNITIONS PROBE TESTIMONY GIVEN

Airplane Firm Keeps Close Contact With Foreign Officials

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11.—(AP)—The senate munitions committee was told today that the Curtiss-Wright Export corporation maintained close contacts with officials of Chile and Bolivia in selling its wares in those two countries.

Comptroller General Lopez of Bolivia was described as a silent partner of the agent for the export corporation during 1933 when the company was negotiating the sale of airplanes to Bolivia. Lopez was repeatedly characterized in letters from Curtiss-Wright agents, however, as a man of high integrity.

Other testimony related that Cueto Pozo acted as an agent for the corporation at the same time he was employed by the Bolivian foreign office.

The committee also was told that in January of this year, the concern arranged with a Chilean official to "watch out for us on the inside" in assisting in sales in Chile.

World, News-Star Will Sponsor Primary Party

The Morning World and News-Star will sponsor an election party Tuesday night, to which all its readers are invited. The party will be held in front of the World-News-Star building on North Second street, and will begin at 7:30 o'clock, when the first returns in the state-wide congressional Democratic primary election will probably be received.

Interest in the election is widespread, because of the tense situation in New Orleans. Returns from all parts of the state will be received over Associated Press wires, and will be given as quickly as the votes are counted in the various precincts.

A staff of World and News-Star correspondents in each parish of the Fifth congressional district will gather the returns in the 14 parishes of Northeast Louisiana, and these will be announced as promptly as received.

The public is requested not to use the telephones of the News-Star and World to ask for returns, as these will be busy receiving the results from various parts of the district. Come to the party and hear the announcements.

JURY STARTS INQUIRY

Members Of Crew Summoned To Appear In Federal Court

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—(AP)—Eben S. Abbott, chief engineer of the liner Morro Castle, today told a board of inquiry that within half an hour after an alarm awakened him the morning of the fire he took off the No. 1 lifeboat with 32 passengers, two of them passengers.

"What I want to know," demanded Dickerson N. Hoover, chief of the department of commerce inquiry, "is why No. 1 boat did not take off more passengers?"

"When I left A deck, there were no passengers on deck," Abbott replied. "Anyone down below must have burned up. We saw no passengers. There were none in sight."

Abbott said he took the boat on orders of the captain, and he believed his boat was the third to get away from the burning liner.

While Abbott was testifying at the department of commerce inquiry, three bridge officers and a wiper appeared at the federal building in answer to grand jury subpoenas in U. S. Attorney Martin Conboy's investigation of the disaster.

They were Chief Officer William F. Warms, Acting First Officer Clarence C. Hackney, Acting Second Officer Ivan Freeman, and Ellis Beaumont, a wiper. They were accompanied by a group of attorneys.

They were questioned behind closed doors by Chief Assistant U. S. Attorney Louis M. Treadwell; Francis P. F. Adams, chief of the criminal division; Assistant U. S. Attorney Joseph Prendergast, and Edward D. F. Eagan, assistant U. S. attorney.

While the witnesses were being questioned in advance of the meeting of the grand jury, agents of the bureau of investigation of the department of justice were seeking additional witnesses.

All four men, it was learned later, refused, on advice of counsel, to answer questions before being taken to the grand jury room.

Willis, slightly deaf, broke the stillness of the scene by shouting to his attorney:

RECORD BALLOT SEEN

Long And Walmsley Candidates Continue Their Campaigns

LAKE CHARLES, La., Sept. 11.—(AP)—Judge Thomas F. Porter of the 14th judicial district court will be declared the nominee for the state supreme court bench from the third district, T. Arthur Edwards, chairman of the Democratic executive committee of the third supreme court district, declared here today immediately on his return here from Beeville, Texas.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 11.—(AP)—With opposing "armies" resting on their arms, New Orleans citizens swarmed to the polls today in Sunday-like atmosphere of calm to choose between the "dictatorship" of Senator Huey P. Long and the old "ring rule" of Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley.

Dark clouds hung low in the skies, threatening rain, but voters came out in such crowds that observers predicted there would be a record balloting.

The whole fight was between "Kingfish" Long and "Turkeyhead" Walmsley, as the two principals are styled, even though neither one is a candidate himself.

Both Long and Walmsley are supporting two congressmen, a supreme court justice and a public service commissioner in the New Orleans district.

The candidates continued their campaigning throughout the day. Senator Long spoke five minutes every hour over the radio. Speakers for Walmsley's Old Regular political organization also made frequent radio addresses.

An arbitration committee of five members was in supreme control of the election. Non-factional plain-clothes officers were dispatched to the polls to handle disputes. The committee had a flying squadron of 300 men to send out in case of trouble.

So, after a two months' long hurrah of soldiers, police, personal invective, court battles and threats of armed conflict, today's balloting brought the first real peace.

Long's 2,000 national guardsmen, the entire state militia, were kept under cover. Long promised they would not even be seen, and that if any of them voted they would change to civilian clothes.

An almost equal number of Walmsley's police were kept in their precinct stations, not venturing near the polls. They were instructed to join their efforts with militiamen if any disturbance occurred.

All barrooms were tightly closed and it was a hard job to find a drink in this fun-loving city.

No political workers were allowed within 100 feet of polling booths. In the past, the campaigning has gone on right inside the booths.

Long said a voter for 30 years had told him it was the first time there had ever been a "clean and fair election in New Orleans" in his experience.

Walmsley said the voters were turning out in greater numbers than he had ever seen and characterized the voting as the "cleanest and fairest" in his experience.

Mrs. Walmsley accompanied the mayor to precinct 14, ward 14, a fashionable residential polling place, where they cast their ballots.

Long casts his ballot in precinct 18 of the same ward, only a few blocks from the polling place of his bitter political enemy.

There are approximately 120,000 persons qualified to vote in the city. The outlying parishes of St. Bernard, Jef-dent's mediation board were confronted with labor's "deadline" on its arbitration proposal, 6 p. m., eastern standard time, Tuesday.

VIOLENCE BREAKS OUT ANEW IN BIG TEXTILE WALKOUT

Under the proposal, both sides would accept the board's decision, and all mills would be closed during the negotiations.

In the Carolinas, where 106,000 workers are out, fifty national guard units were on duty. But the cruising picket motorcades were diminishing. John Peel, of Greenville, S. C., southern strike director, said he had given orders for the "flying squadrons" in that state to disperse.

"I knew if they didn't, it meant slaughter," he said.

The United Textile workers intensified its efforts to close Georgia mills, where 40,500 textile workers already were idle.

Francis J. Gorman Delivers Ultimatum

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11.—(AP)—While President Roosevelt's strike board sought a settlement of the walkout in conferences with textile employers today, Francis J. Gorman, strike leader, warned there would be no further extension beyond tonight of the union's arbitration proposal.

At the same time, the textile strike committee announced a movement to provide a private relief plan for striking textile workers had been started by a group of Washington residents.

Gorman delivered his ultimatum at a press conference as the manufacturers met the presidential board. The union has agreed to submit its cause to arbitration by the presidential board, provided mills remain closed during negotiations, but its spokesman insisted the offer would be withdrawn if not accepted by 6 p.m. tonight.

"This is perhaps the most critical day of the textile strike and by night we shall know whether we must carry the battle to a conclusion by stoppage of work until management can stand it no longer," Gorman said.

Announcing the relief plan, the committee said:

"After many days of study a group of public spirited citizens in Washington has completed plans for a relief program over the whole strike area and will recommend the setting up of local relief committees in every textile community. This will be a challenge to those employers who believe they can starve the workers into submission."

The committee said the names of those arranging the relief program would be made public shortly.

Additional Troops Called Out In Strike

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11.—(AP)—Additional troops were called out today in textile centers to prevent violence as the presidential mediation board sat down to discuss the textile strike with manufacturers.

National guardsmen were ordered on duty in Maine, Connecticut and Rhode Island, while troops continued to patrol mill centers in North and South Carolina, where some mills reopened yesterday.

Although the mediation board asserted it believed the dispute was "not incapable of solution" and that a "settlement can be reached which will be fair to workers, employers and in the public interest," the difficulty in reaching a solution was indicated in the diverse views of how a proposal for arbitration should be carried out.

George A. Sloan, president of the Cotton Textile institute, insisted such negotiations must be between owners and workers of individual mills.

Francis J. Gorman, national strike leader, said settlement must be made with the "textile industries as such."

"That means," he said, "there must be settlement with the entire cotton textile industry, with the entire wool and worsted industry, with the entire silk industry and so on. There will be no settlement mill by mill in any of the divisions of the industry."

Nevertheless, the decision of Sloan to call a number of manufacturers to meet with the mediation board was regarded as a hopeful note. Although the names of those who will join in the conference today was not made public, it was understood they will include ten or twelve of the most prominent manufacturers in the north and south. Among them will be Ernest M. Hood, president of the National Association of Cotton Manufacturers, comprising the northern mills, and W. D. Anderson, president of the American Cotton Manufacturers association, the southern mills.

Labor's offer to let the arbitration board headed by Governor John G. Winant of New Hampshire arbitrate the dispute was continued until 6 p.m., eastern standard time, today—until after the meeting with the manufacturers.

Under the proposal, which was said to have expired yesterday, both sides would accept the decision of the board and all mills would be closed during the negotiations.

Approximately 60 mills reopened in the Carolinas yesterday, but the 5,000 who returned to work were offset by walkouts in New England. Independent surveys showed the number on strike gained slightly as a result of the day's events.

Mississippi Troops Are Guarding Mills

JACKSON, Miss., Sept. 11.—(AP)—Peace was maintained today by national guardsmen's bayonets in two of Mississippi's textile districts and there was no evidence of threatened trouble which brought them to the mills Sunday night.

On request of the sheriffs of Attala and Pike counties Governor Sennett Conner ordered several hundred members of the national guard mobilized and stationed about the cotton mills at Koscisuko and Magnolia.

The mills at these points are operated by the J. W. Sanders company of Jackson and workers there remained on their jobs in the general textile strike while about 325 workers failed to show up for work at the McComb mills, a few miles from Magnolia.

The guardsmen, fully equipped for any emergency, have maintained complete order, and the mills have continued operation.

Governor Conner said the troopers were supplied "at the request of these sheriffs, who certified that a breach of the peace was likely to occur and that their forces were inadequate to control the situation."

Sheriff Will T. Blanton, of Attala county, informed the governor that strike sympathizers had threatened to "close the mill by force" at Koscisuko and that "we received information that numerous employes have been threatened by former employes if they returned to their jobs."

Sheriff D. R. Stratham, of Pike county, wire the governor that "there is likely to be serious trouble at the cotton mill" at Magnolia and formally asked for protection by the soldiers.

The troops today were stationed on indefinite duty at the two mills. Workers at the Stonewall mill joined in the strike, but other cotton mills in the state were not affected.

Textile Strikers Seek To Close Towel Plant

CHARLOTTE, N. C., Sept. 11.—(AP)—A flying squadron of more than 100 carloads of strikers from Gastonia, Concord, Salisbury and Mooresville, bore down on the vast Cannon mills at Kannapolis early today, announcing their determination of closing the world's largest towel plant.

Parading about the plants, they displayed placards designed to gain the allegiance of Cannon workers, and taunted 175 special guards and 130 militiamen who stood quietly arrayed along the mill fronts.

Earlier a squadron of about 80 Gastonia cars had passed through Charlotte, advertising by placard their determination to close the Cannon plants and shouting defiance of Charles A. Cannon, mill president, "and his thugs."

Bayonets and tear gas ready, troopers deployed across the lawns and around the entrances to the plants. Among them was the Hornets' Nest riflemen, national guard troop from Charlotte, which traces its lineage back to the little band of colonists of Revolutionary war days who stood off Cornwallis at what was then Charlottetown.

A similarly tense situation developed at High Point, N. C., where last night soldiers inflicted flesh wounds on six pickets who were members of a crowd attempting to force closedowns at hosiery mills. Three mills failed to open this morning, while throngs of workers jeered as a machine gun company from Greensboro sought to clear the streets.

Although the hosiery strike was not scheduled to start until tomorrow, the Slane, Huntley-Jackson and Melrose plants at High Point found themselves unable to operate today. These mills with a dozen others, have been the scenes of long-drawn out but peaceful strikes each summer for the past two years. The three employ 1,000 persons.

Troops Are Mobilized In New England States

BOSTON, Sept. 11.—(AP)—National guard troops were mobilized in three New England states today for the first time in this area since the general textile strike was called.

Companies F and K, 169th infantry, Connecticut national guard, were under orders to be ready to move to Williamantic.

Two Lewiston, Maine, national guard companies were called late last night at the request of Mayor Robert J. Wiseman, of Lewiston, to relieve local police now on strike duty.

And in Rhode Island, Governor Theodore Francis Green directed Brigadier-General Herbert R. Dean, adjutant general, to order a skeleton regiment of Rhode Island guardsmen into two armories to await further orders in connection with the strike situation.

The Connecticut guardsmen were ordered into active service by Lieutenant-Governor Roy C. Wilcox, who functioned in his capacity as acting commander in chief during the absence of Governor Wilbur L. Cross, who is at his summer home in Lake Sunapee, N. H. Rioting in Danielson, Conn., which resulted in injuries to 15 persons, had preceded the call for troops.

In Rhode Island, the mobilization order resulted from violence at the Sayles Finishing company, Saylesville, where two men yesterday were shot and a third was seriously injured by thrown rocks.

Mayor Wiseman's request for guardsmen at Lewiston came after mill agents had informed him they feared disturbance and possible damage to their property or injury to their workers.

"The case already is in the county court, and will be heard before Judge Smith on October 1," the solicitor said. "What the grand jury may do is a question."

Mrs. Porter is facing a thrice postponed hearing in county court on charges of assault and battery on the child, and also is at liberty under bond on a warrant charging assault with intent to murder.

All three hearings have been postponed because the child was unable to appear in court as a witness.

The child charged Mrs. Porter beat her and frequently would not permit her to eat as a punishment. When taken from the Porter home by Mrs. Thurston Mitchell, Mary Virginia had an infected fractured arm and scars and infections over her body.

A physician pronounced her suffering from malnutrition as well as infected bruises and the fractured arm.

FIRST STRIKERS SEEK U. S. RELIEF

Headquarters to aid textile strikers in obtaining federal relief have been set up in Atlanta. Standing in the center of the picture is W. N. Barker, president of local union No. 2199 of the United Textile Workers of America, handing out relief slips: The union headquarters function, Barker said, is to aid the FERA in finding families in need. Applicants' names are taken and sent to the FERA relief center. The applicant then appears in person, and files a petition for federal relief. If he is found in need, grocery slips are issued by the FERA. (Associated Press Photo).

Mrs. Herring's testimony, interspersed by broken sobs, was the high light of the trial. She told how she and her husband were abducted from a cold drink stand at Magnolia Garden, forced at pistol point to drive nine miles into the country, stripped of their clothing, robbed and two criminal attacks on her were made.

Mrs. Herring pointed at Willis in identifying the man who she said attacked her.

Willis was arrested at Palestine while driving an automobile identified by the Herrings as one given them as a wedding gift.

GLANCY TO QUIT POST WITH NRA, INFORMED STATE

when the blue eagle was restored to the Harriman mills under an agreement negotiated by Glancy.

Johnson, then away on a speaking tour, and George L. Beery, division administrator who had participated in settlement negotiations, expressed disapproval of the action.

It appeared that Glancy's withdrawal plans have no connection with the dispute between Johnson and Donald Richberg, NRA general counsel, which caused the blue eagle administrator to present his resignation recently to President Roosevelt, only to change his mind later.

The resignation of a division administrator also is impending, it was said, as a result of the latest disagreement between NRA and industry—which resulted last week in the resignation of the national retail solid fuel code authority in a body.

George Houston, whose division has jurisdiction over coal dealers said, however, he would remain "until I am told my job is done."

Another division administrator, C. E. Adams, will leave soon. He was understood to desire to return to full-time duty as president of Air Reduction and U. S. Industrial Alcohol.

Dr. Charles F. Roos resigned last night as chief of the research section of the research and planning division. He will become professor of economics at Colorado college.

More than a dozen others are leaving posts with research planning, and the labor advisory and the consumers advisory boards officials insisted the departures were not prompted by dissatisfaction with NRA but were rather a fall exodus of teachers and professors to resume old posts. There were no indications of any steps to fill the vacated places.

NRA Reorganization Program Decided On

HYDE PARK, N. Y., Sept. 11.—(AP)—President Roosevelt and Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, NRA administrator, agreed today upon the principles of an immediate reorganization of NRA to eliminate overlapping functions and provide for simplification of the recovery unit.

Another night conference at the summer White House developed the agreement for establishment of the NRA on the same basis as the federal government with three separate branches—executive, judicial and legislative.

Johnson is going ahead as head of the erecutive branch and will continue the reorganization planning with the president in conferences still to come.

The judicial branch of NRA will take care of labor disputes and also assume the duties of the code authorities.

The legislative agency of NRA will be the policy fixing department. After laying down this ground work of principles for the temporary future of NRA pending enactment of legislation, the president and Johnson put aside the mass of details for further study.

weeks ago and their illness, said Dr. C. C. Stockard of the Lawrenceburg sanitarium staff, was then diagnosed as typhoid fever.

Grimly the three children held to the secret that they had tasted the poison. Young Eric died without telling it. After his death Dr. C. C. Stockard and Dr. T. J. Stockard were called in on the cases and diagnosed them as poisoning. Margaret and Hubert were brought to a hospital Saturday night.

Yesterday, said Dr. C. C. Stockard, they told what had happened—how they found the bag of powder with which Mr. Dyer made a spray for garden plants, how they wondered about its taste and finally decided "just to taste and see."

"It's possible," the doctor said, "that the boy of 14 knew that the stuff in the bag was poison."

In their fight for the children's lives, physicians have given two blood transfusions to the little girl and three to the boy.

Margaret, hospital attaches reported early today, showed slight improvement. But they despaired of saving Hubert Dyer.

THE blame for "blue" days can be laid often to common constipation. It may bring loss of appetite and energy, sallow and pimply skins, even serious illness. Correct it by eating a delicious cereal.

Research shows Kellogg's ALL-BRAN provides "bulk" and vitamin B to relieve common constipation. Also iron for the blood.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is much like that in leafy vegetables. Isn't this better than taking patent medicines—so often harmful?

Two tablespoonfuls of ALL-BRAN daily, relieve most types of constipation. With each meal, in chronic cases. If not relieved this way, see your doctor. Get the red-and-green package at your grocer's. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

Federal Investigators Seek Cause Of Disaster

By Dale Harrison
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—Federal inquirers poked with fresh determination today among the coals of testimony, hunting the cause—be it God's lightning, a fool's cigarette or a madman's torch—of the Morro Castle disaster.

They sought some definite evidence, some real prop, to support the suspicion, voiced without substantiation by

ON NRA PAY

Brother-in-law of Frances M. (Robby) Robinson, aggressive assistant to Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, John Wilshears, above, has an important NRA job—a $6,800 one, in fact, as deputy administrator. Wilshears, a former leather manufacturer, is reported to be "in training" to take charge of the leather section of NRA.

Acting Captain William F. Warms yesterday, that "someone set that fire."

While a new procession of witnesses was forming here to appear before the board of inquiry, other processions were taking shape at private homes, churches and mortuaries—funeral processions of the Morro Castle's dead. Many funerals were set for today and tonight. Others will be held tomorrow.

There is a third procession, inevitable wherever tragedy rests; the procession of the curious—the camp followers of catastrophe. More than 100,000 persons have flocked to Asbury Park, N. J., where the hulk of the five million dollar Ward liner, still burning, sets in the sand.

Already, though she is still the coffin for unknown dead, the Morro Castle is the object of tentative negotiations. The Asbury Park city council wants to make some arrangement by which the hulk, a flame-scarred monument to an estimated 133 dead, can be retained where she rests, just off Convention pier. The councilmen have found her an attraction, drawing visitors from many miles around.

As the inquiry by the department of commerce continues, moving from the customs house to larger quarters in the federal building, a United States grand jury subpoenaed Acting Captain Warms and other Morro Castle officers to tell it their stories. District Attorney Martin Conboy expected to direct the grand jury investigation.

Even as the agencies of inquiry here were striving to piece together some accurate picture of what happened aboard the Morro Castle before and after its wireless sent forth calls for help at 3:23 o'clock (eastern standard time) Saturday morning, a warning of more sea disasters to come was shouted from a Cuban "pirate" radio station.

Speaking over an unlicensed and unidentified station last night, a voice warned all listeners to stay off ships touching at Cuba. The threat, undoubtedly the mouthing of a crank, followed by several hours a telephone call to an airline company in which the anonymous telephone caller said that terrorists were plotting to place a bomb aboard one of the company's planes.

Government, steamship and airline officials were agreed that the threats and warning were based on nothing but a desire to throw a fright into travelers, but nonetheless they have taken elaborate precautions. A careful examination is being made of all cargoes and packages to prevent the execution of the threats.

In Havana the opinion was expressed by the chief of the port police that the Morro Castle was set afire "by an agent of the Caribbean bureau of the third internationale."

Fire department officials at Balboa, Canal zone, began an investigation of the fire that broke out in the Grace liner Santa Rita shortly after the Morro Castle tragedy. They said the fire was "perhaps caused by spontaneous combustion, but it could have been started deliberately."

There was no definite evidence to link the Morro Castle and Santa Rita fires, but agents of both the United States and Cuban governments, as well as of the steamship companies operating out of Havana, are making careful and quiet inquiries.

The fact that a fire occurred aboard the Morro Castle last August 27 was the subject of detailed questioning by steamboat inspectors at yesterday's department of commerce inquiry here. Some circumstances of that fire, which was extinguished without any passengers being aware that a fire had broken out, lent substance to the suspicion of incendiarism, many seamen thought.

A point upon which greater detail is desired concerns the circumstances under which the wireless call for help was sent out from the Morro Castle. The inquiry board, headed by Dickerson N. Hoover of the department of commerce steamship inspection service, sought to determine if there was any delay between the outbreak of the fire and the sending of the call for help.

A body believed to be that of Captain Robert R. Willmott, the Morro Castle skipper whose death occurred aboard ship several hours before the vessel burst into flames, was found aboard the vessel last night. The body, badly burned, was on the floor of the captain's cabin. Fire Chief Taggart of Asbury Park made the discovery, but identification was not positive. The body was not removed.

Positive casualty totals are not yet available. The known death list is 116, with 98 of the bodies identified and two tentatively identified. Seventeen persons are still unaccounted for, [illegible] a total of 133 dead or missing.

Ship Disaster Probe Continues In Havana

HAVANA, Sept. 11.—(AP)—Twenty-five asserted communists today were arraigned in the Marianao court of urgency on charges of following too closely the movements of United States Ambassador Jefferson Caffery during the past few weeks.

This "following," it was charged, was done with a view toward attempting to assassinate the ambassador.

The court took the cases under advisement and must, by law, either indict the defendants or release them within ten days.

Havana port officials today laid down orders for the drastic vigilance of all vessels in port, cancelling all passes to board the ships, as a step in the investigation of the Morro Castle disaster.

Capt. Oscar Hernandez, chief of the port police, said he was making excellent progress with his investigation and expected to announce definite results within two days.

"From now on," said Captain Hernandez, "nobody but a certain number of the crew and the port police on duty at the ships will be allowed to enter the vessels in the harbor.

"Even baggage porters are barred. They must deposit their baggage on the dock and certain designated members of the crew will come ashore and take on the baggage.

"We won't even let army and navy officers board the ships and the names of the crew men assigned to duty aboard the ships while they are in the harbor must be approved by the chief of customs."

The police chief said his best men were working on the Morro Castle case and he was pleased with the result so far. He said that thus far the United States government had not asked him for anything, but if he did have anything it was available to that government.

VOTES ARE CAST AS SUNDAY CALM HANGS OVER CITY

ferson, Plaquemines, St. Charles, St. James and St. John will add approximately 45,000 votes to the total cast for the Long and Walmsley candidates.

The polls, which opened at 6 a. m. (central standard time) will close at 7 p. m.

Orleans Voters March To Polls

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 11.—(AP)—Before the sabre-rattling battle lines of Senator Huey P. Long and Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley, the voters of New Orleans today marched out in the neutral ground in the Democratic primary to cast their choice between the two political generals who are at war over control of city affairs.

Neither Long nor Walmsley were candidates for office in today's election, but each staked his political domination on the outcome of the balloting on the slate of candidates he was backing for other offices.

Armed forces of the two leaders were held beyond the polling bounds today under an arbitration agreement to keep armed men away from the polls and afford a peaceable and orderly election.

The only officers permitted at the polls was the flying squadron of 300 armed men sworn in as special police to see that decisions of an arbitration committee, in complete control of the election, are carried out.

No other armed men will be permitted at the polls from opening time at 6 a.m. to closing time at 7 p.m., when the ballot boxes will be turned over to the clerk of criminal district court for a canvas of the vote by the Orleans Parish Democratic committee.

Senator Long went into the election with a challenge of the nomination of Judge Thomas F. Porter of Lake Charles, an anti-Long candidate for the supreme court from the third district, who was unopposed after the death Sunday night of Justice Winston Overton, incumbent, seeking renomination with Long's support.

Supporters of Judge Porter claimed his nomination under the primary law which says that a candidate shall become the party nominee if his opponent should die within seven days of the primary.

But Senator Long contended that Overton's death left a vacancy and said that an election would be called to fill the vacancy.

He said Attorney General Gaston L. Porterie agreed with him, that "this will not be considered an election." "Even if he had disagreed," the senator said, "a way would have been found so that the people would have been given the right to vote their choice in the matter. As it is a special election will be held to fill the Overton vacancy."

As opposing generals in a mighty conflict, Long and Walmsley threw their tickets into the field in a test of strength between their factions and each predicted victory and threatened to entirely vanquish the foe in the balloting.

The arbitration committee, headed by Judge William H. Byrnes, Jr., of civil district court, selected two men from each side to serve as officials at each of the 262 polling precincts and ordered every saloon in the city closed on election day.

Long's 2,000 militiamen were quartered on the fringe of the city and he said that not a soldier would appear at the polls except to cast his vote, and then would wear civilian clothes.

Walmsley's augmented police force were ordered to their precinct stations and told to remain there to await further orders.

The pact attracted the attention of Postmaster General James A. Farley, who commented last night in New York that "I am glad to note an agreement among the Democratic factions in the New Orleans congressional primary not to use arms or military force at the polls."

In New Orleans congressmen were to be named in the first and second districts in addition to a justice of the state supreme court and a member of the Louisiana Public Service commission.

Other congressional races were sprinkled over the state, but principal interest was focused on the fate of Long's dictatorial authority in New Orleans, where his forces were given almost unlimited legislative power and where a special legislative committee was investigating charges of "graft" from the underworld under the Walmsley administration.

Long offered the city of New Orleans relief from "oppression by the ring" under Walmsley's Old Regular organization and the mayor told the people to go to the polls and vote down the "dictator" for a "return to freedom and constitutional rights."

The congressional seats at the stake were those held by Representatives Paul Maloney and Joseph Fernandez, seeking re-election with the support of Long.

Walmsley's faction was supporting their opponents, Gus Blancand and Herve Racivitch.

The entire strength of the national guard was mobilized by Governor Allen after Long had charged in the city investigation that the city hall was raising an armed force in resistance to him. The troops were sent into New Orleans and took up quarters along the riverfront while Senator Long maneuvered the windup of his fiery campaign and Walmsley threatened to take action with his police force "at the proper time."

State militia first appeared in New Orleans the night of July 30 when the "kingfish" seized the voters registration books under a partial martial law proclamation issued by his ally, Governor O. K. Allen.

His troops maintained sole possession of the books until the mayor's faction a few days ago obtained an injunction from federal court which took supervision and ordered that no names be removed before the election.

DEMOCRATS SEEM TO HAVE CARRIED STATE OF MAINE

tain Farley called "proof ample that the New Deal meets with the approval of the majority of the people of this country."

Fletcher said:

"It is evident that the people have not yet understood what it all means. Somebody, sometime will have to pay the bill, and the people of this country soon will have to realize this. We intend to redouble our efforts all along the line."

Farley said he was content with the result of the Maine election, and added:

"The Democratic national organization during this campaign was satisfied to leave the decision to the intelligence and loyalty of the voters of Maine. For that reason, no concerted effort was planned or carried out in the nature of a campaign while the Republican national organization centered the fire there of its heaviest political artillery, all aimed at the Roosevelt administration policies."

HERBERT HOOVER SEES TYRANNY IN ROOSEVELT PLAN

tion," released for publication, but he refers to "examples of national regimentation we have examined," previously described as delegations of legislative and judicial functions to the executive arms of the federal government.

Mr. Hoover asserts that bureaucracy inevitably follows regimentation and adds:

"No one with a day's experience in government fails to realize that in all bureaucracies there are three implacable spirits—self perpetration, expansion and an incessant demand for more power.

"There are human urges and are supported by a conviction, sometimes justified, that they know what is good for us. Nevertheless these spirits are potent and possess a dictatorial complex. * * * In their mass action they become the veritable exponents of political tyranny."

Mr. Hoover asserts that "free speech and free press have never lived long after free industry and commerce have been repressed. * * * Managed opinion is as much a part of 'managed economy' as 'managed currency' and 'managed agriculture.'

"Bureaucracy has already developed a vast ramifying propaganda subtly designed to control thought and opinion. The constant use of the radio, the platform and the press, by device of exposition, news and attack with one point of view, becomes a powerful force in transforming the nation's mentality, in destroying its independent judgment.

"Bureaucracy's instinctive defense to criticism is to color the information and news with its objective rather than presenting a cold analysis of results. It goes further in resentment to criticism and attempts to meet it with denunciation."

The principal feature of the Y's Men's club meeting Wednesday night at 6:30 o'clock at Hotel Frances will be the reading of a resume of the observations a delegate of the International Association of Y's Men's clubs made on a recent tour of Europe, it was announced Tuesday.

The delegate visited several clubs in the different countries in Europe and has written a report of the foreign clubs' activities and accomplishments to each Y's Men's club in the United States. Advance information is to the effect that some very interesting and pertinent facts are contained in the report, it was said.

ALLEGED NEGRO ATTACKER SOUGHT

12-Year-Old Girl Frees Self From Six-Foot Assaulter

PAOLI, Pa., Sept. 11.—(AP)—More than 100 men tramped the fields and woodlands near here early today searching for a six-foot negro a 12-year-old girl said attempted to attack her.

The intended victim, Jane Shinton, daughter of Harry Shinton, superintendent of the United States Veterans' hospital, Coatesville, said the man stopped her on her way home from a friend's home.

He asked her to read an address written on a slip of paper. As she took it, he grasped her by the neck, clamped her mouth, and dragged her toward a clump of bushes.

Struggling, she freed herself, ran home, and within a half hour men carrying lanterns and flashlights and leading dogs, spread fanlike from the community. State highway patrolmen joined in the hunt.

Mrs. Emily Shinton, the girl's mother, is a former postmistress of Paoli.

Strikes Are Costly

Who pays the cost of strikes?

The question is a pertinent one now, with a large part of the textile industry tied up by a walkout.

The Minneapolis chamber of commerce has been compiling some figures that throw light on the situation. Its study was made on the basis of the recent strike in Minneapolis. Among the things it found were:

The striking truck drivers lost, in wages, $575,000.

Employers lost, through diminished business, $20,000,000.

The taxpayers had to settle a bill of $450,000 incurred as a result of the calling out of the national guard.

Then there were inconveniences caused the general public, and incidental money costs to these that can not be figured or estimated with any degree of accuracy. Losses caused by property damage and many other items, impossible to determine, also would have to be counted in to get the correct total cost of the strike.

The costliness of industrial warfare alone should be enough to cause both capital and labor to make every possible effort to prevent such trouble. But this seems to be the least considered in connection with strikes.

Public opinion has shown that it can compel the settlement of strikes. Eventually it may reach the point where it will act to prevent walkouts.

The End Of The World

If Mr. Voliva's flat world is going to end on September 10 there are a few things that will have to be attended to right away. Previous prophecies from Mr. Voliva put the Day of Destruction in 1946, and most persons were more or less putting off preparing for it from day to day; after all, 1946 is a long ways off, and there was plenty of time to attend to everything.

But September 10 is only a matter of days and it looks as though many will have to step lively. For one thing, there's the matter of vacation—that will have to be crowded in somehow before September 10. A man can't miss his last vacation. Then there are two books, a lawnmower and an umbrella to go back to friends and neighbors if the plan is to look the end of the world in the face with any kind of conscience. One of the books has been around since 1926 and it will leave quite a gap in the household, but this is a time for drastic action.

There is, of course, the silver lining: creditors will have to struggle along as best they can.

Listening to Mr. Voliva's predictions is like taking a chance on one of the great sweepstakes: there is the exciting and even pleasurable sensation of looking forward to a routine shattered event, with only the faintest apprehension it will ever take place.

Death On Wheels

Traffic accident records for the year to date are anything but encouraging. They are decidedly disappointing to persons and agencies engaged in the hopeless cause of accident prevention.

Pennsylvania's accident history for the first six months is typical. During the first quarter of the year the number of collisions between automobiles, between motor vehicles and street cars, between motor vehicles and trains, between motor vehicles and inanimate roadside objects and between motor vehicles and pedestrians mounted at a terrifying rate. Officials and private citizens were alarmed and with good cause. But the second quarter gave some reassurance. Motor accidents fell off 10 per cent and crashes between street cars and motor vehicles were 40 per cent less frequent. Winter and spring driving hazards account for the difference.

What the last four months of the year will bring forth none can say with certainty, but it is a foregone conclusion that the 1934 accident total will exceed that of 1933 by many thousands. And that means fatalities will be up.

Increasing traffic density, faster cars and growing recklessness combine to keep the hospitals and doctors busy. It would seem as if the average driver and pedestrian has assumed either a fatalistic or suicidal attitude.

Abode Renovation

Quickly have the banks responded to the federal government's appeal for loans to home owners for making necessary repairs. This part of the national recovery program is a noble experiment which is certain to succeed nobly.

It was not the leaky roof, sagging porch or broken plaster that Uncle Sam was thinking of when he told the bankers that if they would lend money for home repairs he would guarantee all losses up to 20 per cent of the total loans. His motive was to put thousands of members of the building trades back to work, thus helping national recovery on its way.

Loans for repairs will put to a test not only the confidence and patriotism of the bankers but the confidence and courage of the men and women who have come through the worst of the depression with at least a mortgage-hold on their homes. There will be no loans for repairs if either banker or eligible borrower wavers.

Successful administration of the home repair program throughout the land will greatly diminish the work of the emergency relief and the CWA during the coming winter. It is up to every owner of a house to analyze his repair needs, hunt up a helpful banker and put some men to work.

A national conference will be held to stabilize liquor prices. Maybe they can find something that will stabilize the drinker after the ninth or tenth dram.

Uncommon Sense

HEROES OF THE SOIL

Such hardships as have come to the farmers in the last year or two, unfortunately are not unusual.

Despite the help of modern machinery, improved methods of planting and rearing crops, and the aid of a wider knowledge of soil chemistry, the man who raises the food of a nation is still dependent on freaks of weather—and never sure that there will be an adequate market for what he grows.

The government today is doing all it knows how to do to make sure that the harvest, when it is reaped may be sold.

But the laws of supply and demand are never stable.

And even if a bountiful and saleable crop seems assured, there may be an unwelcome and unexpected horde of nsect pects to destroy it before it con be garnered.

And in a year when the insects are not so bad, there may come a great drouth, like that which recently visited the western part of the country, and the wheat, oats, barley and corn may wither and perish.

In the days of our forefathers the soil had not been exhausted by taking off crop after crop year after year, without any new fertilization to supply the needs of next year.

The farms yielded well, and continued to yield well. It never occurred to those who tilled it that it needed food as man and woman need food and would not continue to bear without it.

Often when the soil was sapped men moved to new farms, for land was cheap, and continued to be cheap through their lives. When water brought life to desert lands, these were cultivated—while they lasted.

Then came the time when nothing more was to be done. The farmers' mortgages were foreclosed, and they had to give up the old life and find work in the city, if they were fortunate enough to find any.

Today the government is actually trying to do something for the farmer, possibly because the farmers' votes have become a power, and they have learned to use it.

But at the best today they lead hard lives.

Yet they bear up under it splendidly. They never give up hope. They study new systems of agriculture, new methods of getting their crops to market, and they are not afraid to knock at the doors of congress to ask for the relief they need.

I believe that in the end the farmers will win back their old independence and prosperity. People must eat or starve.

And unless the farmers keep on the job and work at it the country will face starvation.

It has never starved yet, and thanks to the grit and heroism and enlightenment of the farmers I am certain that it never will.

NOW YOU ARE GONE

Now you are gone and I recall
But happy hours we spent,
And nothing of the hates we knew,
Nor any discontent.

It is a joy that this is so,
For we were friends and knew
So many tender times when dreams
Were high and fair and true.

So I am glad that only this
Occurs to me, your grace,
Your better self, your finer side,
Your happiest, fairest face.

Thus I would have it be always.
Yourself idealized,
That I hold fast in memory—
It was the YOU I prized.

BEFORE THE EXPLOSION

Employer—Now, don't be inquisitive. I discharged my last boy for that.

New Boy—Yes, sir; wot was his name and wot did you pay him and wot was he inquisitive about?

LOGICAL MIND

Jones—Nothing! Nothing! I pay my poor taxes.

Medicant—Well, and so do I. And I gotta get money to pay 'em, hain't it?

COINCIDENCE

Bess—Was that house Jones bought a "stucco?"

Jack—Yes, and so was Jones—stuck, oh, something fierce!

A MATTER OF TASTE

The Eskimo—That fur hunter says when he gets back home from this trip he'll live on the fat of the land.

The Eskimess—Is the fat of the land any better than blubber and other deepsea fats?

HEAVY WORK

Brunette Stenog—What are your duties in the office?

Blonde Stenog—Principally slipping on this gray wig and blue spectacles when the office boy announces the boss' wife.

THE TEST

First Bon Vivant—Why not take a sarsaparilla this time, old top?

Second Bon Vivant—Too early in the evening, old chap. I can still pronounce the cussed word.

They Call It Politics

By CARTER FIELD

WASHINGTON—Since talking with Upton Sinclair, New Deal lieutenants are rather pepped up about the prospects of their 11 Democratic congressmen in California, and of some of the Democratic candidates in districts now held in California by Republicans.

The Socialist novelist convinced them that he has no horns, but, far more important, he convinced them by his adroit handling of questions that he is really a masterful campaigner, and has an excellent chance to win. Which, of course, is what they are interested in at the moment, not what he will really do if elected governor of the Golden Gate state.

That his election will be regarded as a mandate to go ahead with the New Deal in Washington is rather generally accepted. But that his victory, if he wins, will in all probability pull through enough Democratic candidates for the house to insure President Roosevelt the necessary votes to continue his program is even more important from a moral standpoint.

While not the most spectacular thing he is saying, by a long shot, one of the points that impressed Democratic and New Deal politicians the most here was the very subtle nature of his appeal to the conservative Californians. He has not only an appeal to the "have nots," they discovered, but to the "haves." Not to the "haves" who are still accumulating money—if anyone is these days—but to the "haves" who are living on income from invested money.

This is the very type, especially because so many retired business men and others living on their interest and dividends have gone to California, that the conservative Republicans have been counting on to beat Sinclair. And by the same token, that the New Dealers feared would defeat him, and so drag down many Democratic congressman to defeat.

Now they are not so certain. Things seldom are in politics, and this is a case where it is pretty hard to figure the average conservative voter's mental processes.

For instance, take John Smith, with an income of $8,000 a year from investments, living in San Bernadino, or any one of the many small towns surrounding Los Angeles. At heart he is intensely conservative. He is strong for property rights. He is bitterly against any governmental action which might result in decreasing his income, taxing more heavily the corporations paying it, and so forth. So, it might be reasoned at first blush, that he would be desperately opposed to Upton Sinclair or anyone like him.

BUT—John Smith is also a heavy taxpayer in California. He is not only paying high taxes at present to help support a million and a quarter of unemployed in California, but he sees the state debt being increased for that same purpose, which means that he and his children will have to go paying for this support of the idle for years to come.

What will be his reaction to Sinclair's proposition: "Let me put these people to work, producing necessities which they can use and trade with each other. They will not compete with any existing business. On the contrary, they will be self-supporting and thus save the state from bankruptcy. They are no good to business now, for they have no money to buy anything except that which you give them."

It is a question. Until Sinclair arrived in Washington, most people were figuring the conservative vote would all be against Sinclair. Now they are not so sure.

Old-timers here remember a situation in Maryland, just before prohibition. The liquor interests made a deal with the drys whereby the Maryland legislature ratified the eighteenth amendment, and the drys let up so as to permit liquor sales in Prince George's county! The liquor boys of that day were looking for an immediate advantage, and not worrying about the future. There may or may not be a parallel.

JACOBS' CONDITION IS 'SATISFACTORY'

The condition of G. G. Jacobs, Brown Paper mill employe, who was injured Sunday night when struck and run over by an automobile while he was fixing a flat tire on his car, was reported "satisfactory" Monday night at St. Francis sanitarium, where he was carried after the accident. His injuries, consisting principally of bruises and cuts, were not regarded as serious.

Jacobs had parked his car at the side of the Dixie-Overland near West Monroe and under the lights of a car driven by Bill Dunn of West Monroe, who had parked it at the rear of the Jacobs car, was placing a jack under the rear axle when an automobile driven by Luke Moore, negro, of Ruston, crashed into the back of the Dunn car, which in turn hit the Jacobs car. Jacobs was knocked prone by the impact and the rear wheels of the Dunn car struck him, an investigation by the sheriff's department showed.

Moore was arrested by sheriff's officers and lodged in the parish jail to face a charge of driving an automobile while intoxicated and injuring person and property. Four other negroes, Jewel Roane, David Roane, Lott Estres and Rutledge Boner, who were passengers in Moore's car, all of Ruston, were detained temporarily for questioning. Monday afternoon the four were turned over to West Monroe police and were fined $7.50 each in city court on charges of being drunk and disorderly.

15 Years Ago

September 11, 1919

A total loss of $2,800 was sustained by the West Side Lumber company today when fire of unknown origin completely destroyed the steam dry kiln at their plant in West Monroe. Of this amount, $2,000 represents the loss of the kiln and the remainder of $800 was in lumber in the kiln. The structure will be replaced by one of brick, on which work will be begun immediately. Prompt action by the fire departments of Monroe and West Monroe prevented the spread of the blaze to nearby buildings.

Miss Kate Bryant left this morning for Mansfield where she has accepted a position as a member of the grammar school faculty.

A. L. Bell and John Bell returned Wednesday from a vacation trip to points in south Louisiana.

George W. Lester left today for Jonesboro where he will spend two days attending court.

HOME RANSACKED AS POLICE WATCH

Wealthy Aged Widow Dies; Money Caches Sought At Residence

MOBILE, Ala., Sept. 11.—(AP)—A treasure hunt under the watchful eyes of police was under way today at the modest home of a wealthy aged widow following discovery of a cache of more than $12,000 in gold coins, currency and checks.

Mrs. Margaret Steele Cox, who was 89 years old when she died here Saturday, lived in virtual seclusion for years but her friends say that her estate amounts to approximately $200,000, of which $70,000 is in real estate. For years Mrs. Cox protested she was afraid of banks and thus far no bank account has been found.

Locksmiths and carpenters aided in the treasure hunt. And over all the searchers stood a guard of policemen who kept a careful check.

A small wooden box was found in Mrs. Cox's bedroom and in it was discovered $11,852.50 in gold coins, $25 in currency, a sack of small coins and a check for $512 from a local real estate firm.

It was estimated that rentals from real estate owned by Mrs. Cox totaled $500 to $600 every month. She is reported to have told her lawyer that she had more than $100,000 in state and government bonds but none of this has been found.

Mrs. Cox died without leaving a will. Her closest known heirs are the children and grandchildren of her two brothers and one sister. The brothers, Kickael Steele and John Steele, and the sister, Barbara Nordcn, are dead. Descendants of the two brothers are reported coming here from Lincoln Park, Mich., and Birmingham, Ala. Willie Cox, reputedly adopted son of Mrs. Cox, is said to be coming by plane from somewhere in Washington state to seek a share in the estate.

CITY COURT

Disposition of cases in city court Monday afternoon before Judge W. M. Harper was as follows: Josephine Potter, drunk and disorderly, $10 bond forfeited; John Allen, negro, fighting, $5; Lillie Johnson, negro, drunk and disorderly, $5; Stovall Vernon, fighting, $7.50 bond forfeited; Mark Toliver, negro, drunk and disorderly, $7.50; Edna Otis, negro, drunk and disorderly, 10 days; Harland Thompson, negro, carrying concealed weapon, $100; George Washington, negro, drunk and disorderly, $7.50; Tom Anderson, negro, breaking jail, 30 days; Johnnie Wilson, negro, vagrancy, 15 days; Prentiss Lowe, drunk and disorderly, $7.50; Mack Brazell, drunk and disorderly, $7.50; and Richard Lemone, drunk and disorderly, $7.50.

A. L. Crawford Suffers Compound Ankle Injury

A. L. Crawford, 28, carpenter helper, received a compound fracture and displacement of the left ankle Monday afternoon when he fell from a scaffold while engaged in repairing a ceiling of a building in the 300 block of Walnut street. His condition was said to be "satisfactory" at the Vaughan-Wright-Bendel clinic, where he was carried after the accident.

Crawford was employed by the Twin City Motor company and was assisting in building a showroom in the building. He and another workman were working on the scaffold when Crawford in some manner lost his balance and fell to the floor.

OFFICERS TO MEET

An election of officers of the local chapter of the Reserve Officers' corps will be held tonight at 7:30 o'clock at the court room in the city hall, it was announced last night by W. M. Parnell, second lieutenant. All officers are requested to appear at the meeting in uniform.

IN NEW YORK

By PAUL HARRISON

NEW YORK.—In the hundreds of wholesale houses in Manhattan's teeming garment section, and in the scores of big stores and swanky shops on the avenues, there goes on endlessly the world's biggest parade of shapely mannequins.

Now and then I've been a somewhat uncomfortable spectator at fashion shows, which are given hereabout on practically any provocation from a musical show to the opening of a cocktail lounge in some hotel. And always, after a few minutes of simulated interest in the fripperies of style, I've found myself wondering about the mannequins themselves—how they're faring in these times.

Where They Learn

Well, I found out. I walked into the Mayfair Mannequin academy, which is the oldest model-school in America. Miss Gertrude Mayer, variously of Paris, Vienna and London, is the director, and has launched ten thousand hips on the sea of fashion.

Girls from all over the country come to New York to learn how to walk, pose, posture, turn, ascend stairs, sit down, make an exit. There's a different walk for every kind of costume, and a different walk for every type of establishment in which a model is working. In a wholesale house she steps out rather briskly because the out-of-town buyers have a quick eye for line and detail, and want to see a lot of dresses.

In a retail store her behavior is more languorous, her walk more exaggerated. The swankier the store the snootier her manner. She must never, never swing her shoulders; but her hips swing like the balance wheel of a watch. That's what that affected cross-over walking step is for. It's all right to smile at a potential buyer, but the warmth of the smile is a matter requiring shrewd judgment.

High Without Hats

The higher the price range of the store, the taller the girls who model there. Fifth avenue mannequins range from 5 feet 8 inches to an even 6 feet, and are slender, supple and superior looking. Facial beauty is an asset, but more important is a collective type of freshness and intelligence. Bleached blondes are out, declared Miss Mayer. And showgirls, she said, don't make good mannequins; they swing their shoulders and can't seem to grasp the idea that the clothes they're wearing, and not themselves, are the center of attraction.

In wholesale places clothes are modeled by girls from 5 feet 5 inches to 5 feet 8 inches—in high heels. That's because the buyers want to see the costumes on the kind of women who'll eventually wear them, and they have no illusions about exoticism and slinky lines. Apparently modeling is as highly specialized a profession as chorus work, because there's an actual scarcity of good models.

Paid Up To $60 A Week

The girls are paid up to $50 and $60 a week, with occasional extra jobs posing for commercial photographers. They work hard, making dozens of lightning changes, and probably go home humming "Little Mannequin, You've Had a Busy Day." Miss Mayer has no patience with the widespread idea that models are obliged to tour the night clubs with men buyers. Most establishments, she says, definitely forbid any such extra-curricular whoopee.

Just to be on the safe side, however, she coaches her students in how to respond to unwelcome advances. For example, a girl can turn on her No. 3-B smile and say: "Oh, Mr. Zilch, if you had asked me under different circumstances I should have been delighted. But here it is contrary to your and my best interests, and I never break my rule about mixing business with pleasure."

Professional mannequins are pretty wrought up about the competition of society girls who model gowns for a little spare change and the novel experience of working. A social registerite, they say, can get a job even if she carries her clothes in the manner of a buxom farm girl walking over a ploughed field.

I've heard of one such blue-blood who was explaining her position to the real models in a shop. "Of course it's just a lark," she said. "I'm only getting $50 a week here, and I couldn't even keep myself clean on that."

Hollywood Close-Ups

People Don't Understand

Add embarrassing moments Harry Revel and Mack Gordon, the song-writing team, were in San Francisco. As they were going up to their room in a crowded hotel elevator, Gordon suddenly turned to his partner with, "I love you . . . your eyes are blue . . . you fill me with delight."

All eyes immediately turned toward them as the reddening Revel tried to stop Gordon's flow of words. Finally they arrived at their floor and stepped out. "What's the matter, don't you like it?" Gordon inquired.

"Sure, it's fine," Revel replied. "But after this be careful where you spout those lyrics. People are apt to class us as bughouse."

Just Too Good

June Knight has a former admirer who still insists upon sending her orchids, which rather embarrasses her in view of her current romance with Paul Ames. So she has told the florist to substitute roses and send them to hospitals.

The other day, however, she received another orchid with this note from the florist: "Dear Miss Knight—You don't have to think about who sent this, but please wear it. The guy paid five dollars for it and it is the most beautiful orchid I ever have had in my shop."

June wore it.

CATTLE SELLING PLAN ANNOUNCED

Purchasing Program Of AAA Is Revealed By E. R. Strahan

In a letter being mailed to Ouachita parish farmers this week, E. R. Strahan, parish agricultural agent and drouth relief director for the parish, announces that the drouth relief service of the agriculutral adjustment administration will be ready in a short while to purchase cattle from farmers who, by reason of the drouth, have insufficient pasturage and feed to carry their cattle through the winter months.

The extention division of Louisiana State university, the parish ERA and the United States bureau of animal industry are cooperating in the selling program, Mr. Strahan said. The letter, to which is attached a request to be filled out by the farmer requesting an appraisal of his cattle, follows:

"In a few days the drouth relief service of the agricultural adjustment administration will be ready to purchase cattle from farmers who, by reason of the drouth, have insufficient pasture and insufficient feed to carry their cattle through the winter months.

"The prices to be paid for these cattle will be $6 to $14 per head for cattle over two years old, with benefit payments of $6 per head. The price for yearlings 1 to 2 years old will be $5 to $10 with benefit payments of $5 per head. The price for calves under 1 year old will be $1 to $5, with benefit payments of $3 per head.

"If you do not desire to sell your cattle, it may be possible to borrow money from the emergency feed loan office with which to buy feed or seed to plant grazing crops to carry them through the winter. If, by reason of the drouth, you think it advisable to sell some of the animals that you are unable to feed or care for, and if you desire to take advantage of this opportunity to dispose of them, you will please fill out the following request for appraisal of cattle and return to my office or deliver it to the ward committeeman in your ward, after which we will notify you what other steps to take in completing the disposition of the animals that you have to offer."

St. Matthew's Parochial school opened its doors this morning for the first classes of the 1934-35 session with an enrollment of 312 students, of which 72 are in the high school grades and 240 in the grammar department. The enrollment is slightly less than that of last year but is expected to be increased by the addition of students who have delayed in entering, it was said.

Sister Mary Stanislaus is superior and principal of the school. Sister Magdalen is principal of the grades and Sister Mary Hyacinth is in charge of the music department.

REDUCED CROPS ARE EXPECTED

Sufficient Supply To Go Around Is Anticipated, However

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11.—(AP)—The agriculture department expects sharply reduced production this year among the major crops, but believes there will be sufficient to go around.

Largely as a result of the drouth, "total crop production appears much lower than in any year since the beginning of the World war," the department said yesterday. But it added:

"On the whole national supplies of principal food crops, if closely utilized, should be sufficient for ordinary requirements.

By combining estimates for 33 principal crops, the department said indicated yields per acre will average 18 per cent less than last year and about 22 per cent below the average for the past 13 years.

A 1,484,602,000-bushel corn crop was forecast, the smallest since 1881. The 1927-31 average was 2,516,307,000 bushels.

The total wheat crop was estimated at 493,285,000 bushels, with spring wheat accounting for 92,736,000 bushels. Last year the total was 527,978,000 and the 1927-31 average was 886,359,000.

The department said there was enough wheat on hand to meet ordinary requirements.

Red Cross Officials To Meet On Thursday

A regional conference of Red Cross officials of eight northeast Louisiana parishes will be held here Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the Chamber of Commerce offices, Mrs. W. C. Holstein, executive secretary of the Ouachita parish chapter, announced Monday. The purpose of the session is to formulate plans for the annual roll call, which will be held from November 11 to 30.

The meeting will be presided over by Albert Horuff, chairman of the roll call in the district, and will be attended by Richard F. Allen, manager of the eastern area of the American Red Cross.

Mr. Allen will attend similar meetings at other cities and towns in the state during the latter part of the present month, Mrs. Holstein said.

Sir Guy Standing and Anne Revere are prominently cast.

PARTY PRIMARIES ARE BEING HELD IN EIGHT STATES

C. Johnson. Miss Roche described her election as the only way for Colorado to "get in step" with the national administration. Johnson asked for his renomination on the ground he has earned it. The gubernatorial race held the spotlight and pushed all save three of the state contests into the background. There are no contests for Republican nominations.

The New Deal was prominently mentioned in Washington, where voters choose nominees for senator, congress and many state offices. The highlight is a six-cornered contest for the Democratic senatorial nomination, in which Lewis Schwellenbach, New Deal supporter, and John C. Stevenson are the principal participants. Another candidate is Judge Charles H. Leavy of Spokane, indorsed by Senator C. C. Dill, who is retiring.

There are five aspirants for the Republican senatorial nomination, all of whom attacked the New Deal as a threat against "American constitutional rights." Six Democratic representatives in congress seek renomination, Representative Hill alone being unopposed.

Two political veterans face opposition in the Arizona primary. One is Senator Henry F. Ashurst, seeking a sixth term. Four oppose him for the Democratic nomination. The other veteran is George P. Hunt, seven times governor, who seeks the Democratic nomination. He opposes Gov. B. B. Moeur, who defeated Hunt in the primary two years ago. The Democratic contest for congress is between Mrs. Isabella Greenway, named in a special election last year to succeed Lewis W. Douglas, and Frank H. Higleman, Salt River valley farmer. Republicans had several persons on the ballot but these are expected to withdraw and allow the Republican ticket to be chosen by a convention.

Governor William A. Comstock, Democrat, is up for renomination in Michigan today, with opposition from two others. Former Governor Alex J. Goresbeck seeks the Republican nomination in a four-cornered race. Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg is unopposed for the Republican senatorial nomination, while four seek the Democratic post. The state's 17 congressional berths are being contested for by 142 Democratic and Republican candidates, including all the incumbents. Representatives Lehr, Democrat, Hart, Democrat, Brown, Democrat, Woodruff, Republican, and James, Republican, are unopposed.

Republican fights for senator and governor feature the Vermont primary. Senator Warren R. Austin is opposed for renomination by former U. S. Attorney Harry B. Amey in the principal contest. Lieutenant-Governor Charles M. Smith and Benjamin Williams, former holder of the same office, are seeking the Republican gubernatorial nomination.

Representative Charles A. Plumley is unopposed for the Republican congressional nomination. There are no Democratic contests.

The New Hampshire primary is highlighted by the gubernatorial contests in both parties. Governor John G. Winant, recently named head of the textile mediation board, is not a candidate. H. Styles Bridges, chairman of the state public service commission, and Charles E. Carroll, mayor of Laconia, seek the Republican nomination, while George H. Duncan, Eaton D. Sargent and John L. Sullivan want the Democratic bid. Representative Rogers, Democrat, and Representative Tobey, Republican, both face opposition in the congressional contests.

South Carolina will vote in a runoff primary for governor, deciding between Cole L. Blease, former governor and United States senator, and Olin D. Johnston, 38-year-old attorney. In the first primary, August 28, Johnson led with Blease 17,000 votes behind. Nomination is tantamount to election. A contest for lieutenant-governor also will be settled.

'Prodigal Son' Subject Of Evangelist's Address

Rev. Edwin H. Grant, who has been conducting the revival services for more than a week at the Methodist Protestant church here, will deliver his last scheduled sermon of the series Wednesday night, the pastor, Rev. I. L. Yeager, announced Tuesday. Decision as to whether the revival will continue after Wednesday will be made shortly, the pastor said.

Speaking on "The Prodigal Son" Monday night, Rev. Grant said in part:

"The poor prodigal had hosts of friends while he had the cash to show them a good time and go the way of the world. But immediately upon the end of the spending of his fortune, he was friendless and was forced to work at a task greatly hated by his race, the Jewish people. However, his humility was so great and marked by such a repentant spirit, that he was willing to do anything rather than stoop to begging. No man has ever been nor will ever be saved who did not of a truth quit all known sins and sinning. But no sooner does the poor pentitent quit and fall on the merits and mercy of Jesus, till a power beyond that of the human floods his redeemed soul and gives him victor over all known sin, self, and the things of the world."

Rev. Yeager said approximately 40 persons had professed salvation during the past three days of the meeting. Services will be held at 10 a. m. and 7:45 p. m. Wednesday.

CATTLE DIPPING REPORT IS MADE

Clearing Up Of Tick Eradication Zones On Time Predicted

BATON ROUGE, La., Sept. 11.—(AP)—The clearing up of the 16 and a portion parishes comprising the 1934 tick eradication zones by December, within the schedule time, was predicted today by Louisiana livestock sanitary board officials following what was described as a gratifying report of dipping of a total of 803,588 cattle, horses and mules in the zones during August.

Commissioner Harry D. Wilson and Dr. E. P. Flower, ex-officio chairman and secretary of the livestock board, said that relatively few ticks were being found in the eradication areas, the parasites having been found last month on only 60 of the animals dipped.

The clearing of the infection zones will leave only 22 of the state's 64 parishes infested, which will be considered when 1935 eradication plans are drafted.

The August dipping figures showed that a total of 671,139 cattle went through the vats.

The parishes comprising and zones are:

Acadie, Bienville, Bossier, Calcasieu, Cameron, Iberia, Jeff Davis, Lafayette, Livingston St. Helena St. Landry (portion), St. Martin, St. Tammany, Tangipahoa, Vermilion, Washington and Webster.

THE KNEELING CAMEL

By Anna Temple Bailey

The camel at the close of day
Kneels down upon the sandy plain
To have his burden lifted off,
And rest again.
My soul, thou too shouldst to thy knees
When daylight draweth to a close,
And let thy Master lift thy load,
And grant repose.
Else how canst thou tomorrow meet,
With all tomorrow's work to do,
If thou thy burden all the night
Dost carry through?

The camel kneels at break of day
To have his guide replace his load.
Then rises up anew to take
The desert road.
So thou shouldst kneel at morning's dawn
That God may give thy daily care,
Assured that He no load too great
Will make thee bear.

Fashions in names change as do styles in women's clothes, according to "The Mother's Encyclopedia," advising parents to be careful not to handicap their children in selecting names for them. Books have sometimes set the fashion for a whole generation. With no preceding history of account, "Edna" leaped into popularity about 1870, soon after the publication of "St. Elmo," whose saintly heroine was named Edna Earl. Another book name which enjoyed a great vogue is "Thelma," from Marie Corelli's novel of that name, published in 1889. There was a whole flock of "Florences" after Florence Nightingale became the beloved spirit of Crimean hospitals. Today "Mary" leads all others, about one in twenty-four. Fashions in boys' names change more slowly. "William" is the most common today, as it was in 1885.

The attractive cards issued by Mrs. G. B. Cooley, Mrs. J. B. Kugler and Mrs. William Rodriguez for their "at home" on September the twelfth were graced with an etching of the Cooley's handsome home. The interest of society is centered in this event which will bring Monroe's fashionable world together between the hours of four and seven in the evening.

At the tea hour on Monday a few congenials met over the tea cups in Mrs. Alymer Montgomery's attractive home where two charming out-of-town guests, Mrs. Dabney Maury and Mrs. Frank Drought of San Antonio, Texas, were the central figures.

The tea table, with its beautiful appointments of silver and crystal and china reflected a lovely pink color scheme accented by a cluster of pink Radiance roses in silver basket. Luscious confections were served with the fragrant Orange Pekoe to Mrs. Dabney, Mrs. Drought, Mrs. Henry Biedenharn, Mrs. Elmer Slagle, Mrs. A. K. Kilpatrick, Mrs. S. E. Huey, Miss India Stubbs and Miss Emma Louise Biedenharn.

Mr. and Mrs. Phil Carroll and Mr. Fay Jarrell of Alexandria were the week-end guests of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Rogers. Mrs. Jarrell who has been the guest in the Rogers' home for the past week returned home with them.

Mrs. John Downes and son, John Richard, of Houston, Texas, are enjoying a visit in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Downes. At the present time they are visiting relatives in Fort Necessity.

Satchie Cooper Celebrates Birthday Anniversary With Lawn Party At Sunset Hour

At the sunset hour Mondaf, Monroe's younger beau monde romped and played under the swaying Japanese lanterns in the gardens of the Allan Sholar home on Riverside when Satchie Cooper, lovely young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Woodworth Cooper observed her ninth birthday anniversary with a lawn party.

Games, particularly enjoyed by children of Satchie's age, were introduced during the evening and kept the guests happily amused until the cutting of the handsome birthday cake with its nine flaring pink tapers piercing the dimness of the garden.

SPITE MARRIAGE

by Katharine Haviland-Taylor

SYNOPSIS: Marsha Moore remembers her parents only as gay and futile people; she has lived many years with her spinster Aunt Gertrude, whose harsh regimen has gradually made Marsha a hard and heartless hunter of men. But now she has met Bob Powers, home on vacation from his job in Mexico, and she finds that she does not want to hurt him, even though she finds it impossible not to do so sometimes. Bob is calling

Chapter Seven

MARSHA PERTURBED

BOB murmured, "Thanks awfully —" as he settled by her.

"And you can hold my hand," Marsha added.

He took it and for some moments he sat staring down at it; and again she had the curious and new impulse to tears that had lately disconcerted her.

Suddenly he held her hand against his cheek. "I love you very much, Marsha," he said in a whisper. 'What are you going to do about it? I know I'm not—half the man you should have but—" (his voice thickened) "if caring counts—"

"But I don't know whether it does," she answered coolly as she drew her hand away.

"I don't mean to bother you," he said.

"Then don't dear," she answered dghtly.

He was staring down on her as he did so often; adoringly, yet probingly.

"You won't like it much where

"It would kill me to hurt you."

'm stationed in Mexico," he concluded, "and I can't go back without you."

"You seem quite certain, Bob—"

His chin squared; he frowned. 'I'm not," he said, "and I wish I were a better liar. I try to act certain, feeling that perhaps that's the way to win. I've heard so from other men—but right in the midst of it I know I can't cheat you. You see?"

"I do, my dear!" she assured him. She wished he were Geoffrey, her sort; as her aunt had put it that day, "equally depraved." He attracted her strangely, but she did not want to be made miserable by attraction, to feel through it her cheapness, to remember through it her many compromises.

She rose. "We'll go somewhere and dance!" she said quickly; "this doesn't do! One thinks, and then—but come on! I'm not domestic!"

HE had risen slowly and as a man does who would rather not rise.

"And you wanted to play mushroom and to talk about our souls," she accused.

"No," he contradicted. "I wanted to talk about myself . . . and of how lonely I'd been, and of how I dream now, that I'll never be lonely again. I had a real dream last night. In it I was coming back to the shack down near Aires Calientes and you were on the porch waiting as I turned into the gulch.

"I saw you through a gap in the trees . . . you held out your arms . . . I've never, never had, awake, the equal of that moment. I ran the rest of the way."

He broke off abruptly. She stared up at him, who beneath tan was flushed.

"You'll never know," he said after a long silence, "how I care for you. For there would be no way of showing you. But all life, if I had the chance, I would try to prove—"

Once more he broke off abruptly. "I've bored you," he said, a little stiffness in his voice. "Forgive me—"

She saw his shoulders square, and understood through them his resolve not to trouble her. Never had she known such control. He held her cloak for her, but his hands did not linger on her shoulders as some men's did. He said, smiling a little, and mirthlessly, "I would not want to do that too often!"

IN the street he signalled a taxicab and in it he sat away from her. She had known so many men who found excuse to edge closer with every jolt. Some day he would find the right woman of course, some very good woman who would not be afraid of domestic evenings and of what silence might bring forth.

"Are you tired?" he asked anxiously.

"I don't think so."

"You are unusually silent, Marsha."

"If you want me to chatter sweet nothings, I'll—"

He interrupted. "I want you to do, while with me, exactly what you want to do, Marsha."

She moved suddenly to rest her cheek against his muscular upper arm. She heard him draw a sharp breath. "It means nothing," she explained, "but you said I was to do as I wanted to do."

"It means more than you think," he said; "I know it does, if my arms mean rest to you." His voice trembled, broke. He moved, slipped his arm around her, drew her close; held her gently. "Do—you mind?" he whispered.

"Oh, no!" she answered quite steadily, a little wearily.

"I love you so much; I want so much to kiss you," he said and he was proud of the steadiness with which he had managed to speak.

"Why not?" she answered. It might help him, she thought, to kiss before he rode away. And of course it would make no difference to her. Nothing much could make any difference to her.

He took off his hat before he bent his face to hers; then very gently he touched her lips with his.

"I am quite mad about you," she heard. She raised a hand to touch his cheek and the touch made him show a little of the madness, a very little, she thought. But he said, breathlessly, "Dearest, tell me, I didn't frighten you? It would kill me to hurt you in any way."

He seemed quite himself, dancing. "Please be brotherly," she had begged, "the other—rather bores me!"

His arm that encircled her did not once tighten, although his effort to keep it from doing so more than once made him flush darkly and the veins on his forehead thicken. But he seemed quite himself and brotherly, and Marsha told him at two that she had had "an enchanting evening."

For once in her life, Marsha felt a slight sense of escape at returning to her aunt's straight-laced, prim house. She felt with Bob as an actress might feel who had played the same role too many times, and suddenly found the man playing opposite her had dropped several cues in a row.

She did not sleep soon. She lay thinking of Geoffrey Tarleton who never dreamed asleep or awake and who knew her measure and whom, in her way, she loved. She would feel better after an evening or two with him. And meantime, she hoped she would not really hurt Bob Powers.

Something very important happens to Marsha, tomorrow.

Eight beautiful girls, members of the younger set, comprising the H. H. H. club, have returned from blissful summer vacation and are now looking forward to a winter filled to overflowing with pleasure, happy in the companionship of one another.

A dinner party at the home of Miss Jane Terzia, Friday night, paved the way for the winter social season. Guests of honor on this occasion were Mrs. Wesley Shafto, club mother, and sponsors, Henry Biedenharn, Jr., and Leon Apgar.

The beautifully appointed dinner table was developed in the club colors, yellow and green, with a low plaque of yellow roses fringed with maiden hair centering the board. Corsages of yellow roses graced the covers for the club members and boutonnieres were presented to the sponsors.

A beautifully embossed cake with the letters H. H. H. across the surface was cut by the retiring president, Miss Eleanor Colbert, and served with the ices. Members of the club availed themselves of this opportunity to present Miss Colbert with a beautiful bracelet as a token of appreciation for her services as president last year. New officers for the coming years are: Miss Virginia Faulk, president; Miss Eleanor Colbert, vice president; Miss Doris Read, secretary and treasurer; Miss Jane Terzia, sargeant-at-arms.

Skidding New York Team Is Endeavoring To Apply Brakes

GIANTS DEFEATED BY PIRATES; LEAD CUT TO 4 GAMES

Cardinals, Behind Dizzy Dean, Trounce Philadelphia, 4 to 1

By Herbert W. Barker
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Their National league lead melting away rapidly before the thrust of the western clubs, the New York Giants, sought to apply the brakes and avert a dangerous skid today.

The situation was not yet precarious but the world champions were doing no cheering over the fact that the juicy seven-game lead they enjoyed over the St. Louis Cardinals four days ago had shrunk to four. Not when they are confronted by a four-game series with the Cards in general and the Dean brothers in particular starting Thursday.

Folding up in the ninth like a worn-out umbrella in a windstorm, the Giants surrendered their second successive game to Pittsburgh's rampaging Pirates yesterday, 9-7, while the Cards, behind Dizzy Dean, rolled over the Phils, 4-1.

Home runs by Mancuso, Critz and Ott, the latter's 33rd, gave the champions a 5-0 lead in the first three innings and Hal Schumacher, although unsteady, still was leading by three runs going into the ninth. But errors by Vergez, Mancuso and Leiber, coupled with singles by Grace, Lloyd Waner, and Vaughan, a pass and a long fly gave the Pirates five runs, the ball game and their seventh successive victory. Burleigh Grimes received credit for the victory.

The Cards, meantime, waltzed in to their triumph over the Phils as Dean, allowing only five hits and fanning seven, outpitched Curt Davis. Cincinnati nosed out Brooklyn, 6-5, in the only other National league game.

The situation was comparatively quiet in the American league, where Detroit increased its lead over the New York Yankees, held idle by rain, to 4 1-2 games, by winning a 2-1 decision from Boston's Red Sox.

A five-run rally in the sixth plus fairly effective pitching by a rookie, George Caster, gave the Philadelphia Athletics a 9-6 victory over Cleveland, while Cliff Bolton's pinch home run with the bases filled and two out in the seventh carried Washington to a 7-4 decision over the Chicago White Sox.

Yarosz And Dundee Meet For Welterweight Title

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 11.—(AP)—Ted (Fiddler) Yarosz, who next to a boxing glove likes a violin best, stages a fistic opera with Vince Dundee tonight for the middleweight championship of the world.

The 30-year-old champ, already beaten twice in non-title fights by Yarosz, six years his junior, says "there'll be no fiddling in this fight."

He and the challenger, who hails from the smoky steel town of nearby Monaca, expects to be well within the 160 pound weight limit when they step on the scales late today.

ARKANSAS TITLE WON BY BARNETT

Little Rock Tennis Star Takes Straight-Set Victory In Final

TEXARKANA, Ark., Sept. 11.—(AP)—Arkansas' open tennis championship Monday was in the hands of Ed Barnett, Little Rock star, by virtue of a straight set victory at 7-5, 6-4, 6-0 over Morey Lewis, 17, Texas college champion of Texarkana, in the finals of the state competition here yesterday.

After dropping the men's singles title to Barnett, Lewis engaged Bob Murphy, Shreveport, La., and won 6-3, 5-7, 6-1, 6-3, to take the junior singles crown.

Lewis and Rupert Stuart, Gurdon, paired to retain the junior doubles championship which they won in 1931, last time the open was held, they defeated Murphy and Hugh Stevens, 6-2, 7-5, 6-4.

Barnett's singles victory gave him his fourth major win of the year in Arkansas, as he was previously the winner of the Southwest Arkansas tournament at El Dorado, the Arkansas closed tournament at Pine Bluff and the Y. M. C. A. tournament at Little Rock.

Hopman Seigel and Charles Webber, Little Rock, won the men's doubles yesterday, eliminating Dr. L. O. Leet, Texarkana minister, and John Thomas, 6-0, 6-2, 6-0.

The women's singles title went to Miss Linnie Boyd, Shreveport, who defeated Miss Marjorie Burford, Texarkana, 8-6, 6-3.

Columbian Gassers Are Winners In Two Games

The Columbian Gassers, leaders in the Swartz softball league, defeated the Sav-Mor Grocers Sunday, winning by a score of 13-4.

Those starring at bat for Swartz were Johnson, Evans, Douglas and Kilpatrick. Swartz players gave their pitcher excellent fielding support.

Following this game the Gassers took a game from the Druggists of the Twilight league of Monroe, winning this game also by a score of 13-4 and letting the Medicine Men down with six hits, while the Gas Men garnered 16 off the offerings of Joe W. Mitchell, one of the all-star pitchers in the Twilight league.

The Gassers are now issuing a challenge to any team in the Monroe district. They are especially anxious to meet the winner of the National Guard-St. Matthew's play-off in the Twilight league. Their proposal is for a four-game series, with receipts from the two games played at Swartz to go to the benefit of the Parent-Teacher association and with receipts from the games played in Monroe to go to the Monroe team for whatever purpose they care to use it.

JACK O'BRIEN IS BOOKED TO MEET KELLY IN MONROE

Nick Elitch And Johnny Plummer To Tangle In Main Mat Event

"Pretty Boy" Kelly, 205-pound former football star of the University of Tennessee, who has made the fans sit up and take notice by his performances as a matman since he left the university, will have his hands full in the match to be staged Friday night, beginning at 8:30, at Roosevelt stadium, Promoter Charlie Bruscato announced Monday. As his opponent in the ring in the semi-final match, Kelly will meet Jack O'Brien, tough Irishman from Chicago.

O'Brien is a somewhat older head at the game than Kelly and should give the latter plenty of trouble. He knows most of the holds and is able to give many of the wrestlers lessons along this line. In addition, he is rough a-plenty when his opponents start getting rough. Kelly also is well up on the science of wrestling, having made a study of that phase of the game and having put much of it into practice to the discomfort of his foemen.

In the final go Nick Elitch, colorful and powerful Greek, will show his wares against Johnny Plummer, who has demonstrated his ability here several times for the benefit of the fans and who succeeded in stopping "Cowboy" Luttrall in one of the matches on last week's card. In that match Luttrall was forced to give up after he had suffered a wrenched arm. In a match here the week before Luttrall was disqualified for using foul tactics in the ring.

Promoter Bruscato says he has lined up four good men for the two headliners in the coming show and that he is confident they will give the fans plenty of excitement.

Recent matches at Roosevelt stadium have drawn excellent crowds, the house being filled practically to capacity on several occasions. This adds to the excitement, as most fans get more kick out of any kind of athletic performance when there is a big crowd and in addition, in a big crowd there is almost always some one who wants to join in on the side of one contestant or another.

GENTLEMEN START ON HARD TRAINING

Late Start Makes Quick Work In Intricate Phases Necessary

SHREVEPORT, La., Sept. 11.—(Special)—A belated blast on Saturday set in motion the preliminary preparations for another football season at Centenary college, and left the coaching staff with a problem to solve of how to cram into ten days all the essential work that will have to be done before the shot and shell begin to scream in actual competition in a game against Louisiana college on September 19.

With two games scheduled in the same week in which they open, the Gentlemen, undefeated in 21 games in the 1932 and 1933 seasons, face the heavy training program that will get them out of bed almost at the crack of dawn and keep them at their grid-iron chores until the street lights begin to blink in the evenings.

Virtually the whole squad of 35 men was on hand when Coaches Curtis Parker and E. T. Renfro sounded the call to moleskin arms, and the fact that most of the men reported in fine physical condition was a cheering circumstance.

Southern intercollegiate rules forbade an earlier start for the Gents, but of a mind to make the best of it, the drillmasters lost little time in getting down to the more intricate phases of the work, and despite the twin handicaps of a late start and the necessity of almost rebuilding the team, they expect to make a very creditable showing in their earlier battles, and hope to have the squad in the desired pink for the major aspect of the program that leads off with a game against Oklahoma in early October at Norman.

Centenary's strength this season will be concentrated in the tackles, at center and in two backfield spots. Elsewhere the rebuilding process necessitated by the loss of 12 letter men will have to start almost at the basement. The tackles, with two letter men, Sid Binion and Conway Baker, returning, should develop no alarm whatever among the high command. At center, Fred Williams will give the Gents the benefit of his expert all-around center play, particularly as it relates to his ability to diagnose plays; and in two backfield positions, the Gents seem set, with Captain-elect Buddy Parker holding down one of them, and Chester (Cotton) Weidman the other. Both will be given the chance to show what they can do at the quarterbacking position where Manning Smith held forth last season so successfully.

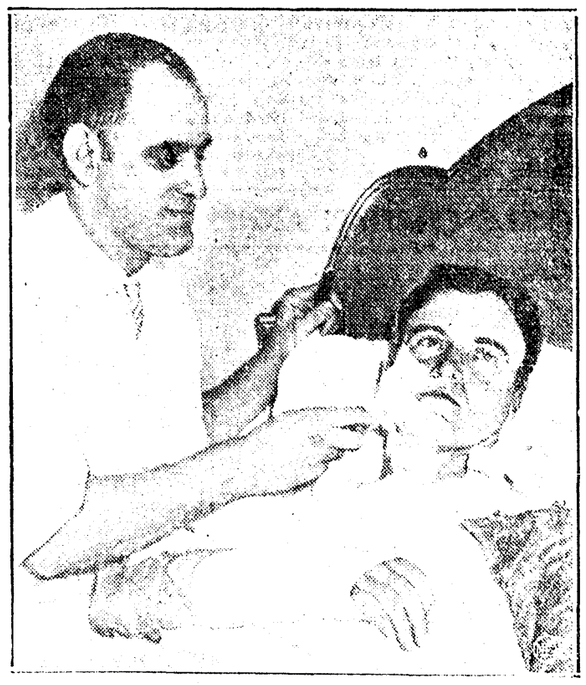
CRONIN FINALLY GIVES UP



When that jinx that has been following the Washington Senators all year couldn't make the fiery, game Joe Cronin give up after it had attacked Joe Kuhel, Johnny Stone, Buddy Myer, and Luke Sewell, it went to work on the Nats' manager. It caught up with Joe during a recent game with Boston, and from a melee at first base, he emerged with a broken arm. Here he is shown getting shaved in a hospital, with the injured member in a sling.

New Bobby Jones Flashes Out To Eliminate Ouimet

Fred Haas, Jr., Of New Orleans Comes Through First Round

BROOKLINE, Mass., Sept. 11.—(AP)—A new Bobby Jones flashed across the American amateur golf firmament Monday—18-year-old Robert Carpenter Jones, of Detroit—to whip the renowned Francis Ouimet at the veteran's own game and furnish the sensation of the first round of the 38th national championship.

With Atlanta's Bobby Jones among an excited gallery of spectators, almost unnoticed in the rush to watch this brilliant young newcomer to golfing fame, the Detroit boy withstood heavy pressure from start to finish and by virtue of his spectacular putting eliminated Ouimet by the slender margin of one up in 18 holes.

Young Jones not only failed to crack at any stage of their thrilling close match but outplayed Ouimet with one of the day's finest performances, a 72 for Brookline's classic course that was only one over par and two shots better than the veteran's medal score. Ouimet's 74, incidentally, would have been good enough to beat a majority of the survivors, but it failed to keep him from being eliminated at the outset of his bid to regain the title he has held twice before.

The gallery and experts alike, attracted by the novelty of a new Bobby Jones, quickly thrilled to the youngster's steady play and coolness under fire. Against a veteran famous for his putting exploits, the Detroit boy himself displayed something akin to an inspired touch on the greens. On two occasions, with a sidehill 12-footer on the short seventh and a 25-footer in the tenth, Bobby saved holes that Ouimet seemed to have clinched.

An eight-foot putt on the 15th saved Jones again as they halved the last five holes. Playing the 18th, Ouimet hit a magnificent iron shot from the rough but it failed by less than a foot to carry the green, dropped into a trap and the veteran's last chance faded. Jones, on the front edge in two, took three putts to go down but his five, good for a half, was all he needed.

Despite Ouimet's downfall and the upset of Max Marston of Philadelphia, a former champion and 1933 runner-up to George T. Dunlap, Jr., the old guard of American golf emerged from the opening skirmish with flying colors. Marston, playing raggedly after gaining a two-hole lead, lost to Knox Young, Jr., of Pittsburgh, one up on the 18th but Chick Evans of Chicago, Chandler Egan of California, Jesse Guilford of Boston and Davidson Herron of Pittsburgh, all former holders of the crown, were triumphant.

Evans, with flashes of his old skill, captured a ding-dong battle from young Crawford Rainwater of Atlanta, 3 and 2, with only one of the 16 holes halved.

All told, seven ex-champions remained in the title hunt in the first all-match played tournament conducted in 31 years. Ross (Sandy) Somerville, the Canadian who won the crown in 1932, came through against Ed Kirouac, former Massachusetts state champion, winning by 2 and 1. Dunlap, the defending king, and Jess Sweetser of New York, another ex-title holder, swing into action tomorrow. Bob Gardner of Chicago, who won the tournament twice, was forced to default at the last minute because of the illness of his mother.

Completed in a heavy thunderstorm this afternoon, 55 matches paved the way for the second round, also at 18 holes, Tuesday with the field reduced to 128 players. Besides Dunlap, such other favorites as William Lawson Little, Jr., of San Francisco, the holder of the British amateur title, and Johnny Goodman of Omaha, start their campaigns in the second round, having benefitted from first round "byes."

Others of the younger generation of stars came through with a series of sparkling victories, although such sectional favorites as Fred Haas, Jr., of New Orleans, the southern champion, and Chandler Harper of Virginia Beach, were carried to extra holes. Haas, in a fine comeback, squared his contest with Billy Sixty, Milwaukee sports writer, on the 18th and won out on the 20th. Harper squared his contest with Dom Socoli of Hartford, Conn., when the latter three-putted the 18th, and then the Virginian won on the first extra hole.

Zell Eaton of Oklahoma City, Rodney Bliss, Jr., of Omaha and Charley Yates of Atlanta, the inter-collegiate champion, were decisive winners. Eaton, holder of the western amateur crown, disposed of John D. Ames of Chicago, 4 and 3, while Bliss eliminated Max Kaesche, New Jersey star, by the same margin. Yates put out George Berkey of Portland, Ore., 3 and 2.

Verne Stewart, Stanford university player who led the entire country in the sectional qualifying play at Denver, was eliminated by the veteran Fred Wright, Jr., several times holder of the Massachusetts state title, 4 and 3.

17-YEAR-OLD BOY LEADING JOCKEYS

Dublin Taylor Performer On "Big Time" Little More Than Year

NEW YORK.—(AP)—From out of the west, cradle of the riding profession, has come Dublin Taylor, 17-year-old 100-pounder, to show the way to the jockeys in the race for 1934 honors.

A performer on the big time only a little more than a year, the light complexioned, baby-faced lad from the cross-road town of Hominy, Okla., has booted home 170 winners, since Jan. 1. Silvio Coucci, one of the few products of metropolitan New York to make good, is his closest rival and trails by more than 30 winners.

Dublin comes by his ability to ride honestly. He was only eight years old when his dad tossed him over a quarter-mile horse and sent him out to win a race at the county fair. It was many years, however, before he came to the notice of Dave Ahearn, who in his hey-day rode successfully for E. R. Bradley.

"I rode my first winner August 11 last year on that little bitty chestnut hoss, Ruane, in a mile and a quarter race at Thistledown, Ohio," Dublin explained. "That was my eighth mount on the big time circuit."

But it was not until he arrived at Saratoga that the lad received his greatest thrill.

"Gee, it's fine, swell," he said as he stood in awe, looking over the beautiful Saratoga course.

He was in ecstacy after finishing second with his first mount at the spa After weighing out, he became lost for a few minutes and had to be directed to the jockey's quarters.

Despite the fact that Coucci is the closest of his rivals, Dublin can't tell you much about the veteran's riding.

"To tell you the truth, I haven't really watched Coucci ride yet."

GIANTS DEFEATED AND CARDS GAIN

New York Club's Defense Crumbles As Pittsburgh Pirates Rally

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—(AP)—The New York Giants' defense crumbled Monday as the Pittsburgh Pirates rallied in the ninth to score five runs to defeat the world champions 9 to 7 for their seventh straight triumph. The defeat, the Giants' third successive setback, reduced the champions' lead over the Cardinals to four games.

The Giants were charged with six errors, three of them in the ninth when the Pirates coupled timely hits with the mistakes to chalk up the victory. They drove Hal Schumacher, seeking his 22nd triumph, from the mound and continued their hitting off Carl Hubbell. Schumacher was charged with the defeat, his seventh of the season.

Three home runs by Gus Mancuso, Hughie Critz and Mel Ott helped to pile up a commanding lead for the Giants, but it was undermined by their ragged fielding, in which every member of the starting line-up with the exception of Joe Moore, Manager Bill Terry and Ott had a part. Ott's homer was his 33rd and gave him the National league lead.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 11.—(AP)—The St. Louis Cardinals successfully continued their efforts to catch up to the league leading New York Giants, defeating the Phillies 4 to 1, Monday behind the five-hit pitching of Jerome "Dizzy" Dean.

Jack Rothrock, Cardinal outfielder, providing the batting punch with two singles and a double in four times to bat.

Texas League

(By Associated Press)

Action in the Texas league's second annual Shaughnessy pennant play-off will be inaugurated tomorrow night in what the four rival managers believe will be one of the tightest championship scrambles on the league record book.

Skipper Fred Brainard and his fourth-place Dallas Steers leave tonight for Galveston to engage the Buccaneers in two games before returning here for the final three games, if that many is necessary to determine the series winner.

Brainard plans to fire Southpaw Charlie Barnabe against the Bucs instead of the previously announced choice of John Whitehead.

"I plan to pitch Barnabe. I may change my mind by tomorrow night. It depends on how Charlie feels after arriving at Galveston," Brainard said.

Billy Webb, who drove his Buccaneers into first place the last three days of the regular season, favors Slim Jim Bivin as the first hurler to face the Steers. Harry Gumbert is Webb's second choice. In last year's play-off, Galveston eliminated Dallas. Webb is anxious to get the jump on Dallas, and in Bivin he will show a pitcher who won twenty games during the regular campaign.

The San Antonio Missions, last year Shaughnessy winners, will rely on Ash Hillin's mighty right arm to mow down the Exporters in the opening battle. Hillin clicked off twenty-four victories during the straight-through race even though he did not pitch well the final month of the season.

Manager "Dutch" Lorbeer's hustling Beaumont Exporters, who finished in third place, are confident Steve Larkin will tame San Antonio in the first melee. Larkin worked in twenty-six games, won eleven and lost five this year. He is one of the Exporters' best bets in crucial games. Lorbeer has nominated himself to catch. The Shippers leave tonight for San Antonio.

With no advance in admission prices, Moody stadium at Galveston and Tech field at San Antonio are expected to be filled to capacity for the opening battles. The two survivors will meet in a seven-game series to determine the championship and the right to represent the Texas league in the Dixie against the Southern association champion, which will be settled in a series between Nashville and New Orleans.

Lafayette, Opelousas Continue Flag Battle

OPELOUSAS, La., Sept. 11.—(AP)—Each the winner of two games, Lafayette and Opelousas continue their fight for the Evangeline league pennant in the fifth game of their four-out-of-seven game playoff series here today.

Both teams rested yesterday and were ready to continue play this afternoon.

John Burrows, who won the series opener for the local nine and stepped in in a relief role in the third game to aid in taking that contest, too, was slated to start again today.

Lafayette's White Sox have not announced their starting hurler in today's game.

DETROIT TIGERS DEFEAT BOSTON RED SOX, 2 TO 1

Bengals Forge Ahead As Yankees Are Rained Out In St. Louis

DETROIT, Sept. 11.—(AP)—Hitting out two home runs, one in the seventh to tie the score and the other in the ninth, the bat of Hank Greenberg brought the Detroit Tigers a 2 to 1 victory over the Boston Red Sox Monday. The triumph boosted the Tigers' margin to four and one-half games over the Yankees, who were rained out at St. Louis.

Elden Auker, freshman right-hander who hurled part of the first game of Saturday's twin-bill, was in as fine a form with his throwing arm as Greenberg was with his bat. He allowed only three hits and only six balls altogether were hit out of the infield. Almada, the Spaniard recently brought back to Boston from Kansas City, connected with two of the safe blows.

Gordon Rhodes would have been almost as effective but for the presence of Greenberg. He held Detroit to five hits, two of which were made by the giant Jewish first baseman and two by Manager Mickey Cochrane.

PHILADELPHIA WINS

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Sept. 11.—(AP)—While George Caster, right-hand pitcher recently acquired by Connie Mack from Portland, Ore., held the Indians in check Monday, his teammates made 13 hits off three Cleveland hurlers and Philadelphia won, 9 to 6.

Caster, tiring in the ninth inning, was relieved by Roy Mahaffey, but the rookie was credited with the victory. He limited the Tribe to nine

BOLTON HITS HOMER

CHICAGO, Sept. 11.—(AP)—Cliff Bolton stepped up as a pinch hitter with the bases full, two out and the score tied in the 7th inning Monday and slapped a home run in the right field seats to give the Senators a 7 to 4 victory over the White Sox.

Hugo Klaerner, making his first start at a Hose, was the victim of the blow. He previously had pitched fair ball despite a lack of control. Then in the seventh Manush and Schulte singled, Susko sacrificed and Sewell was passed purposely. Bolton batted for Kerr and hit his homer.

Southern Association

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Sept. 11.—(AP)—One lone run robbed Pitcher Frank Gabler of the Nashville Vols of the distinction of blanking New Orleans, the team that seems certain to win the second half of the Southern association race and meet Nashville in the play-off.

Gabler, giving up six hits, held down the Pels while his mates got 16 hits to roll up a 7-to-1 score last night. The Vols got 13 of their hits off the veteran Andy Messenger.

New Orleans has three more games to play with Nashville and the experts are watching the series closely to get a line on what will happen in the play-off for the league title.

Nashville won the first half race.

Chattanooga, in second place, lost a 5-to-2 decision last night to the last place club, Little Rock. Atlanta defeated Birmingham, 2 to 0, and Memphis whipped Knoxville, 3 to 0. The game at Memphis was costly to Knoxville, for Right Fielder Walter French suffered a badly bruised leg when he collided with First Baseman Johnny Hodapp while going after a fly.

Birmingham was held to four hits by Chester Martin, Atlanta rookie. The Crackers hit Griffin hard to put across their two runs in the first.

Another rookie, Joe Butzman, hurled for Memphis. Coming up from Canton, Miss., he gave up only four hits. Hulvey of Knoxville allowed eight hits.

Ferriday Athlete Will Return Soon To L. S. U.

FERRIDAY, La., Sept. 11.—(Special)—Nathan "Buddy" Blair, son of J. A. Blair of this city and a member of the L. S. U. track, field and basketball teams, who after injuring his arm at a track meet in California, finished the season as a member of the Winnsboro club, champions of the Big Six league, is home on a visit before returning to L. S. U. to resume his studies next week.

Blair drove in two of the runs which enabled the Winnsboro club to win the pennant in the Big Six league recently. He hit a home-run and a single to help win the pennant for the Franklin parish nine and is receiving congratulations on all sides.

Basketball prospects are bright at L. S. U. and so are football hopes, says the young Ferridayite. He thinks Malcolm "Sparky" Wade, the all-American high school star from Jena, who is his running mate on the cage combination and who was injured in an automobile accident recently, will be well enough to play this season.

Blair's injured arm has responded to treatment. He will leave for L. S. U. on September 16, after attending the seventh annual outboard motorboat regatta of the local post of the American Legion on Lake St. John.

Tiberius, Roman emperor, wore a laurel wreath in thunderstorms as a protection against lightning.

SHIELDS' LOSS TO KIRBY BIG UPSET

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Sept. 11.—(AP)—A blond from darkest Africa, left-handed Vernon G. Kirby, ruined what little decorum the rain has left in the men's national singles tennis championships Monday, by calmly popping over America's top ranked star, big Frank Shields, in an otherwise uneventful quarter final play.

It was scarcely a contest as the perpetually surprised looking Briton, a recognized internationalist as a doubles player, but still rated only number three even in Africa, shuttled Fire Ball Frankie about the premises like a long legged animated checker and won with something to spare, 4-6, 6-4, 6-4, 6-3.

That was excitement enough for the day, although thunder showers burst on the scene again and the crowd of 8,000 at the West Side club, delaying things for an hour. But rain has come to be an established part of the tournament playing.

Kirby, whose chief excuse for being here is that Fred Perry, the defending champion, likes him as a traveling companion, will see more than enough of his friend Tuesday for they meet in the upper half of the bracket semi-final. Perry joined Kirby in the semi-finals in swift fashion, tearing through Cliff Sutter of New Orleans, nationally ranked number four, 6-3, 6-0, 6-2.

In the lower half of the bracket, two members of the unfortunate Davis Cup squad, Sidney B. Wood, the blond New Yorker, and Wilmer Allison, veteran doubles player from Texas, will meet Tuesday in the second semi-final. Allison gained his place by winning one set from Lester Stoefen, of Los Angeles.

With the score all even at the end of four sets yesterday, the fifth was put over to this morning and the final result was 8-6, 4-6, 11-9, 6-8, 6-2 in Allison's favor.

NEBRASKA SQUAD STRONG ON SPEED

LINCOLN, Neb., Sept. 11.—(AP)—Speed minus experience plus spirit squals the 1934 University of Nebraska football team.

At least that's the way Coach D. X. Bible sizes up the Cornhusker eleven as he faces a nine game schedule and a quest for a fourth consecutive Big Six conference championship with perhaps the greatest team in Nebraska gridiron history.

Franklin Meier, all Big Six center last year, is the only regular of the 1933 team back. There are only six other major lettermen on the squad. They include Henry "Chief Bauer, 160 pound quarterback and star passer. He teamed through high school and two years at Nebraska with George Bauer, Nebraska's all-American fullback last year. Bauer has not been on the squad the last two seasons.

From four minor lettermen, 10 candidates from last year's B team, and one of the flashiest sophomore crops in years will come other material for the team.

Like the 1933 champs, the Cornhuskers will be light and fast. Bible thinks they'll outspeed the veterans of last year and plenty of open work is in store for Conhusker opponents. This is assured by the speed of Jerry LaNoue, a midget back who skirted end for a touchdown the first time he carried the ball in a varsity game, the deadly passing of Bauer and the pass snatching ability of a pair of sophomores, Lester McDonald and Lloyd Cardwell.

Defensively, the 1934 Nebraskans cannot hope to be as strong as last year's Cornhuskers whose goal line was crossed only three times, but a spirited battle for places on the first team is forecast between last year's reserves and the crop of new men.

The schedule:

Sept. 29—Wyoming at Lincoln.
Oct. 6—Minnesota at Minneapolis.
Oct. 13—Iowa at Lincoln.
Oct. 20—Oklahoma at Norman.
Oct. 27—Iowa State at Lincoln.
Nov. 10—Pittsburgh at Lincoln.
Nov. 17—Kansas at Lawrence.
Nov. 24—Missouri at Lincoln.
Nov. 29—Kansas State at Lincoln.

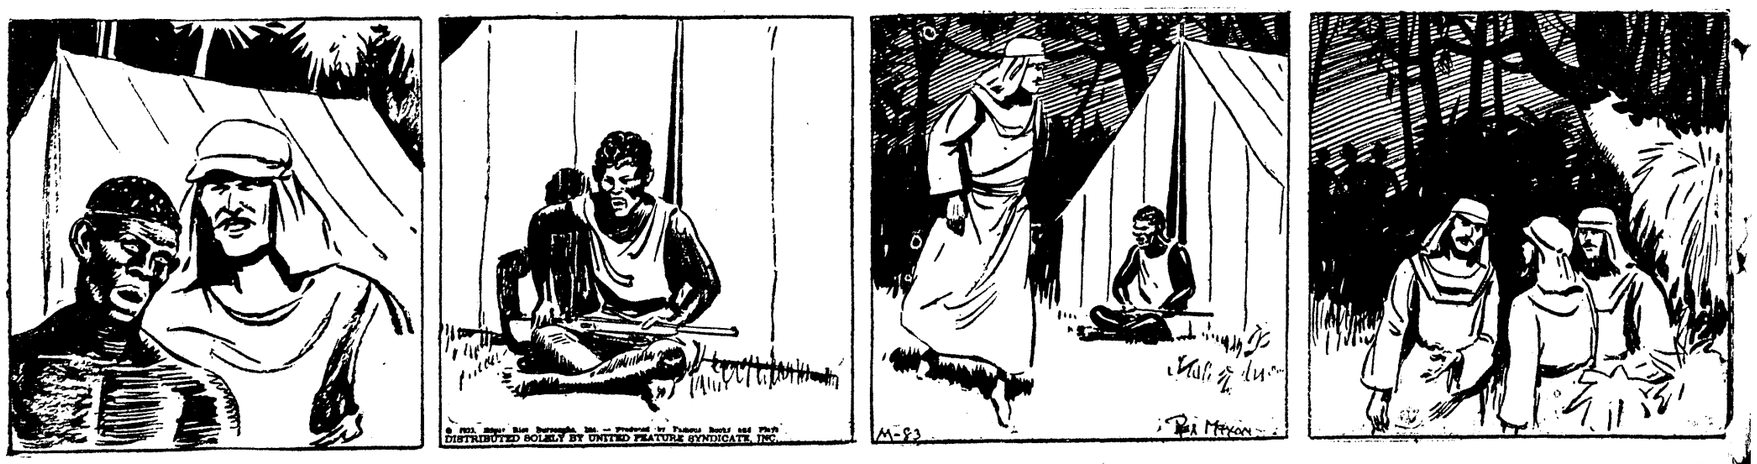
TARZAN THE INVINCIBLE — —By Edgar Rice Burroughs



Ibn Dammuk had bided his time and now, in the Arabs' camp by the swollen river, he at last found the opportunity he had so long awaited. By promising him his liberty, Dammuk enlisted the services of one of the blacks who had been forced to accompany Abu Batn.

A separate tent had been pitched for Zora Drinov and La, and before it sat a single sentry, whose presence Abu Batn considered more than sufficient for this purpose, which was, perhaps, even more to protect the women from his own men than to prevent escape.

This night, which Ibn Dammuk had chosen for his villainy, was one for which he had been waiting ever since he had found a member of his own tribe upon duty before the tent of the captives. This man was bound by laws of hereditary loyalty to serve and obey him.

In the forest, just beyond the camp, waited Ibn Dammuk, with two more of his own tribesmen, four slaves that they had brought from the desert, and the black porter who was to win his liberty by this night's work. Ibn Dammuk smiled as he pictured what was happening.

Cotton

New Orleans

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 11.—(AP)—The cotton market was very quiet today with only limited trade buying and some scalping by ring traders. After an opening gain of 6 to 7 points, despite slightly lower cables than due as a result of some overnight buying orders, prices eased off on long liquidation.

December traded down to 13.08 and March to 13.18, or even with yesterday's close. Late in the morning, prices rallied moderately on short covering, December moving up to 13.16 and March to 13.24, or 6 to 8 points above the close of yesterday.

At mid-session and during the afternoon, the market was steady and at or near the highs.

Exports for the day totaled 15,662 bales.

The market, after ruling quiet but steady most of the afternoon turned firmer late in the afternoon owing to a fair trade demand, shorts covering and some improvement in stocks.

October traded up to 13.09, December to 13.21 and March to 13.31, or 11 to 13 points above the lows of the morning.

The close was steady and at or near the top, prices showing net advances for the day of 9 to 12 points, March showing the greatest advance.

Cotton futures closed steady at net advances of 9 to 12 points.

New York Stocks

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—(AP)—Stocks moved uncertainly today, with sentiment mixed and speculative enthusiasm only luke-warm. Just how much the list was influenced by the Maine election results was a matter of argument. The metals displayed some resistance, but small gains and losses were the rule elsewhere. The close was irregular. Transfers approximated 600,000 shares.

By Victor Eubank
(Associated Press Financial Writer)

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—(AP)—Financial markets shuffled through an irregular performance today as most traders continued to hold aloof from the speculative box office.

Interpretations of political and economic news varied considerably. Stocks were quite lively in the first hour or so, with overnight selling orders in the metals shaking this group down 1 to 3 or more points. Support appeared for the more depressed issues later, however, and early losses were more than cancelled in several instances.

U. S. government securities generally pointed downward in the face of further study of the treasury's new financing program. Grains were usually narrow, although rye was a bit heavy on talk of imports. Cotton showed mild rallying tendencies. Other commodities were spotty. The dollar again moved higher in terms of the European gold currencies.

Shares of U. S. Smelting, after being off nearly 4 points, recovered for a gain of 1. Howe Sound, Cerro De Pasco and American Smelting also came back for advances of fractions to around a point. Ligget and Myers B got up a point, while Santa Fe, Southern Pacific, N. Y. Central, Case, Loew's American Telephone, Consolidated Gas, Johns-Manville, Montgomery Ward and National Distillers were a trifle higher. Allied Chemical yielded a point, as did Evans Products. U. S. Steel, American Can, Du Pont, Sears Roebuck, Western Union, Union Pacific and many others were unchanged to slightly lower.

The concensus in the financial district was that the "New Deal" had more than held its own in the Maine contest. Some selling of loan stocks was reported on the part of those who had expected the Republicans to make a better showing in this important election. The outcome, however, was not a surprise to the majority of market analysts.

Commission house commentators were decidedly mixed in their opinions of the current trend in equities. It was pointed out by some, however, that the market's technical position had improved considerably due to the recent declines. It was believed that short selling has been much broader than in some weeks past.

The rather pronounced drop in price of stock exchange memberships was discouraging to brokerage circles after seat quotations had been holding steady for some time while business was at extremely low levels.

LECTURE SLATED HERE WEDNESDAY

Rev. R. M. Bentley To Speak At First Christian Church

Wednesday evening at 7:45 o'clock the First Christian church will present another of its series of addresses on church doctrines, Rev. Thomas F. Jett, pastor, announced Tuesday. Rev. R. M. Bentley, pastor of the Gordon Avenue Methodist church, will be the speaker of the evening. The subject of his address will be "Beliefs and Practices of the Methodist Church."

"These periods of denominational instruction," Rev. Jett said, "are proving to be of great help to our people and a very deep interest is being manifested on the part of those attending. It is good for the general public to know what each of the various denominations in the city stand for in their religious beliefs. To know the doctrine of each of the churches will have a tendency to develop a better understanding between the church members themselves and bring them closer together in fellowship and community service."

Other lectures to be heard at the church were announced by Rev. Jett as follows: September 19, Rev. E. D. Holloway, Presbyterian doctrine; September 26, Rev. E. F. Hayward, Episcopal doctrine, and October 3, Rabbi F. K. Hirsch, Jewish doctrine.

PLANS FOR FAIR BEING COMPLETED

Locations Of Various Exhibits In West Monroe Announced

Plans are rapidly being completed for the Ouachita Valley fair, which will be held in West Monroe October 2 to 6, Lee Hawkins, publicity chairman, said Tuesday. The premium list for this year's exhibits has been increased approximately 40 per cent and many new features have been added to its attractions, he said.

The locations of the various exhibits will be as follows: Art department, corner Wood and Cotton streets; school department, Painich building, next door to City drug company; women's department, Benson building, Trenton street; agricultural and men's departments, Natchitoches street at rear of West Monroe State bank; and poultry and cattle departments, Calvert's mule barn on Cotton street. The carnival and concessions will be located on a lot near the central section of the city.

The general headquarters office of the fair association is at 304 Wood street, with Rev. George Dierlamm, manager, in charge.

One of the most popular attractions of the fair will be the old fiddlers' contest. Street dances will be held every night while the fair is in progress.

A meeting of the committee in charge of the women's department will be held Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Mrs. Sidney Stewart of Calhoun is manager of the department.

Principal Hayes Prepares For Opening Of School

Jack Hayes, principal of Ouachita Parish high school, and Mrs. Hayes, have returned from their summer vacation, which they spent principally in Kentucky.

Immediately upon his return here, Mr. Hayes began making preparations for the opening of school on September 17. One of his chief tasks between now and that time will be to assist students in making out their schedules of study.

Students who filled out schedules at the conclusion of last term need not report for fall work until the opening day of school, but those who have not filled out schedules should do so this week.

Present prospects for the school season are good, Mr. Hayes said, and indications are that the enrollment will be fully as large, if not larger, than usual.

AT LOCAL THEATERS

AT THE PARAMOUNT—The combination of one of the greatest stars of the stage and screen, Leslie Howard, and one of the greatest stories in modern literature, make RKO-Radio's "Of Human Bondage," which opens today at the Paramount theater, one of the most entertaining dramatic pictures to emerge from Hollywood this year.

Leslie Howard desired to star in "Of Human Bondage," and W. Somerset Maughan wanted a player of Howard's fine histrionic calibre to play in his story. These favorable production aspects combined with John Cromwell's intelligent direction, Lester Cohen's brilliant scenario and a flawless cast result in a colorful, enjoyable production destined for boundless success with lovers of the Maughan classic, Howard fans and the new host of movie-goers which the picture will attract.

"Of Human Bondage" poignantly dramatizes worthy Philip Carey's great love for unworthy, selfish Mildred. Philip is deeply in love with this promiscuous chit. He seeks for release through an affair with the intellectual Nora and then finally with compassionate Sally. His firm attachment to Mildred causes Nora to desert him in despair, but Sally's love proves to be his salvation.

The romantic action gains momentum as it rolls majestically to an absorbing climax.

Leslie Howard's dramatic power and sympathetic interpretation excels anything he has done before. Bette Davis comes through with her greatest performance as Mildred. In other prominent roles, Frances Dee as Sally offers her finest portrayal since Meg in "Little Women," and Kay Johnson portrays Nora with conspicuous aptitude. Strong characterizations are contributed by Reginald Denny, Reginald Owen and Reginald Sheffield.

A splendid screening of a classic story with the magnificent Howard in the leading role, "Of Human Bondage" is a "must-be-seen." It will remain unforgettable.

AT THE CAPITOL—The most important of the recent Broadway dramatic season's successes comes to the Capitol theater, today in the first showing of Paramount's "Double Door."

With an original and stirring theme, the assistance of two actresses from the original cast, who interpret the central characters, fine acting from the supporting cast, and inspired direction, "Double Door," in its picture version, proves a worthy successor to the stage hit, which nightly thrilled Broadway audiences for more than seven months.

"Double Door" depicts the efforts of the new generation to escape the stifling clutches of the traditions and the wealth of the generation which preceded it. It brings to the screen, in Mary Morris and Anne Revere, members of the original stage cast, a pair of unforgettable character portraits.

Miss Morris plays the part of Victoria Van Brett, the spinster who rules the fortunes and the fate of the fabulously wealthy Van Brett family, one of the richest in New York. When Kent Taylor, as her brother, marries Evelyn Venable, she begins a systematic campaign to destroy the happiness of the young couple.

Although she accuses the young bride of infidelity and attempts to draw her husband away from her, the young couple decide to leave the unhappy Van Brett mansion. In a final attempt, she tries to murder Miss Venable, but the concerted efforts of Victoria's timid sister, played by Anne Revere the thoroughly aroused Taylor and his friend Colin Tapley, defeat her plot and bring the picture to a happy ending.

LOUISIANA PAYS MUCH TO NATION

Federal Tax Assessments In State Amount To $15,873,788

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11.—(Special)—Louisianians paid the federal government $15,873,788 in 153 different classes of tax assessments for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1934, it was reported today by the treasury department.

Nearly one-third of these 153 tax classifications represented new taxes imposed by the National Industrial Recovery act, the agricultural adjustment act and the repeal of prohibition.

Louisiana's federal tax burden for the fiscal year 1934 was $6,421,697, or 68 per cent greater than for the fiscal year 1933. Of the $15,873,788 total for 1934, $4,799,512 was paid in income taxes and $11,074,275 in miscellaneous taxes, including the newly imposed levies. The gain in income taxes over the period was 21 per cent; in miscellaneous taxes, 102 per cent.

Averages for the country as a whole showed a gain in total internal revenue of 42 per cent, in income taxes 9 per cent, and in miscellaneous taxes 70 per cent.

Of the new taxes, NIRA levies from Louisiana amounted to $885,729, of which $673,998 was for capital stock, $182,493 for dividends, and $29,237 for excess profits. Wine, liquor and beer taxes, in 30 different classifications, netted $3,344,358, of which $2,342,765 came from beer taxes, $945,736 from distilled liquor levies, and $55,857 from wine taxes.

AAA taxes paid by Louisiana processors and farmers for 1934 amounted to $1,517,897, the bulk of which was in cotton taxes, which totaled $1,012,378. The rest came from levies on wheat, tobacco, field corn, hogs, paper and jute fabrics competing with cotton, and sugar cane and sugar beets. Total for sugar cane and sugar beets was $13,552, but this tax became effective on June 8, 1934, and therefore was operative for less than a month before the totals were tabulated.

Manufacturers' excise taxes paid by residents of the Pelican state amounted to $4,498,905, the greatest single item of which was the gasoline tax, which totaled $3,521,660. Other collections of excise taxes included $545,035 for lubricating oil, $364,174 for electrical energy, $12,022 for perfumes and cosmetics, $5,590 for tooth pastes and toilet soaps, $9,535 for jewelry, $14,636 for candy, $15,290 for syrups and soft drinks, and $1,949 for matches.

Collections of other levies brought in $497,670 in estate taxes, $11,146 in gift taxes, $141,543 in tobacco taxes (not including AAA tobacco levies), $8,669 in oleomargarine taxes, $5,556 in narcotics taxes, $683,521 in stamp taxes, $75,181 for admissions, $67,008 for club dues, $403,444 in taxes on bank checks, and $426,113 from transportation of oil by pipe line.

Skin Itchy. Very Sore Rash Formed. Healed by Cuticura.

"My skin became very itchy, mostly on the legs, and later a rash formed that was very red and very sore. I could find no relief in ointments or salves. The rash itched, causing me to irritate the skin very much. This caused me to be restless as my clothing aggravated the rash.

"This kept up for months until I sent for a free sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I found a great improvement so I bought more and I used only two cakes of Cuticura Soap and two boxes of Cuticura Ointment and I was healed." (Signed) Edward Moore, 200 N. Judge Wilson Expresses Appreciation to Voters of Fifth Congressional District.

On the eve of the election I wish to express my sincere appreciation for the splendid support I have received in every section of the Fifth Congressional District, and I am very proud to find that the people of the Fifth Congressional District are interested in the solution of national problems which relate to their interest and are not mislead by picayunish and petty appeal to prejudice and misrepresentation of facts. You know my work for the farmer, the laboring man, the business man, and in fact every interest involved in the safety and upbuilding of our District and State.

I have tried to conduct my campaign in such a manner as to appeal to the intelligence and independence of the voters, and I know of nothing I have said or done which would offend any fair minded citizen of the District, and if I have made any criticism it has been in self-defense.

I appeal for your vote on the record of my service in the past and opportunity of service in the future.
